Kids' damage now parents' liability: law

The Arlington Heights Village Board Monday adopted an anti-vandalism ordinance establishing parental responsibility for their children's crimes and bringing violations under the jurisdiction of the local branch of the Cook County Circuit Court.

Trustee Robert H. Miller, chairman of the Zero-Vandalism committee, said the ordinance was "the final tool in legal maneuvering" to combat vandalism at the local level.

Miller said, however, the ordinance "is not a final solution to the problem, but a deterrent."

HE SAID THE "positive tools" of youth counseling, work by the police juvenile bureau and work with other youth agencies will create a climate in which the increasing number of incidents can be reduced.

The ordinance allows the circuit court to assess restitution for damages from the parent or legal guardian of the vandal. The ordinance calls for fines of up to $500 to be levied by the court in addition to the required restitution.

Victims of vandals still will be able to seek "additional civil remedies" through private law suits, according to the new ordinance.

The ordinance was proposed by the Zero Vandalism Committee as part of its package of measures to cut the number of incidents in the village. The committee recommended, and the board earlier approved, a reinstatement of a curfew law for juveniles in the village.

The original ordinance submitted by the committee called for mandatory restitution of damages and a provision that could force families to seek professional counseling to deal with problem children.

HOWEVER, THESE provisions were stricken in the final revision as prepared by Village Atty. Jack M. Siegel.

Siegel said the provisions would have improperly interfered with the court's authority to establish penalties.

In other action, the board deferred hearing a report from Village Mgr. L. A. Hanson on alternative methods of financing the proposed parking garage for the central business district.

Village Pres. James T. Ryan said a special meeting of the board will be called on Aug. 23 to hear the recommendations.

Trustees August C. Bettman, chairman of the special committee studying the central business district, and David Griffin were absent from the meeting Monday.

Ryan said the question should be addressed in the presence of the full board.

Nov. 1 finish for town hall

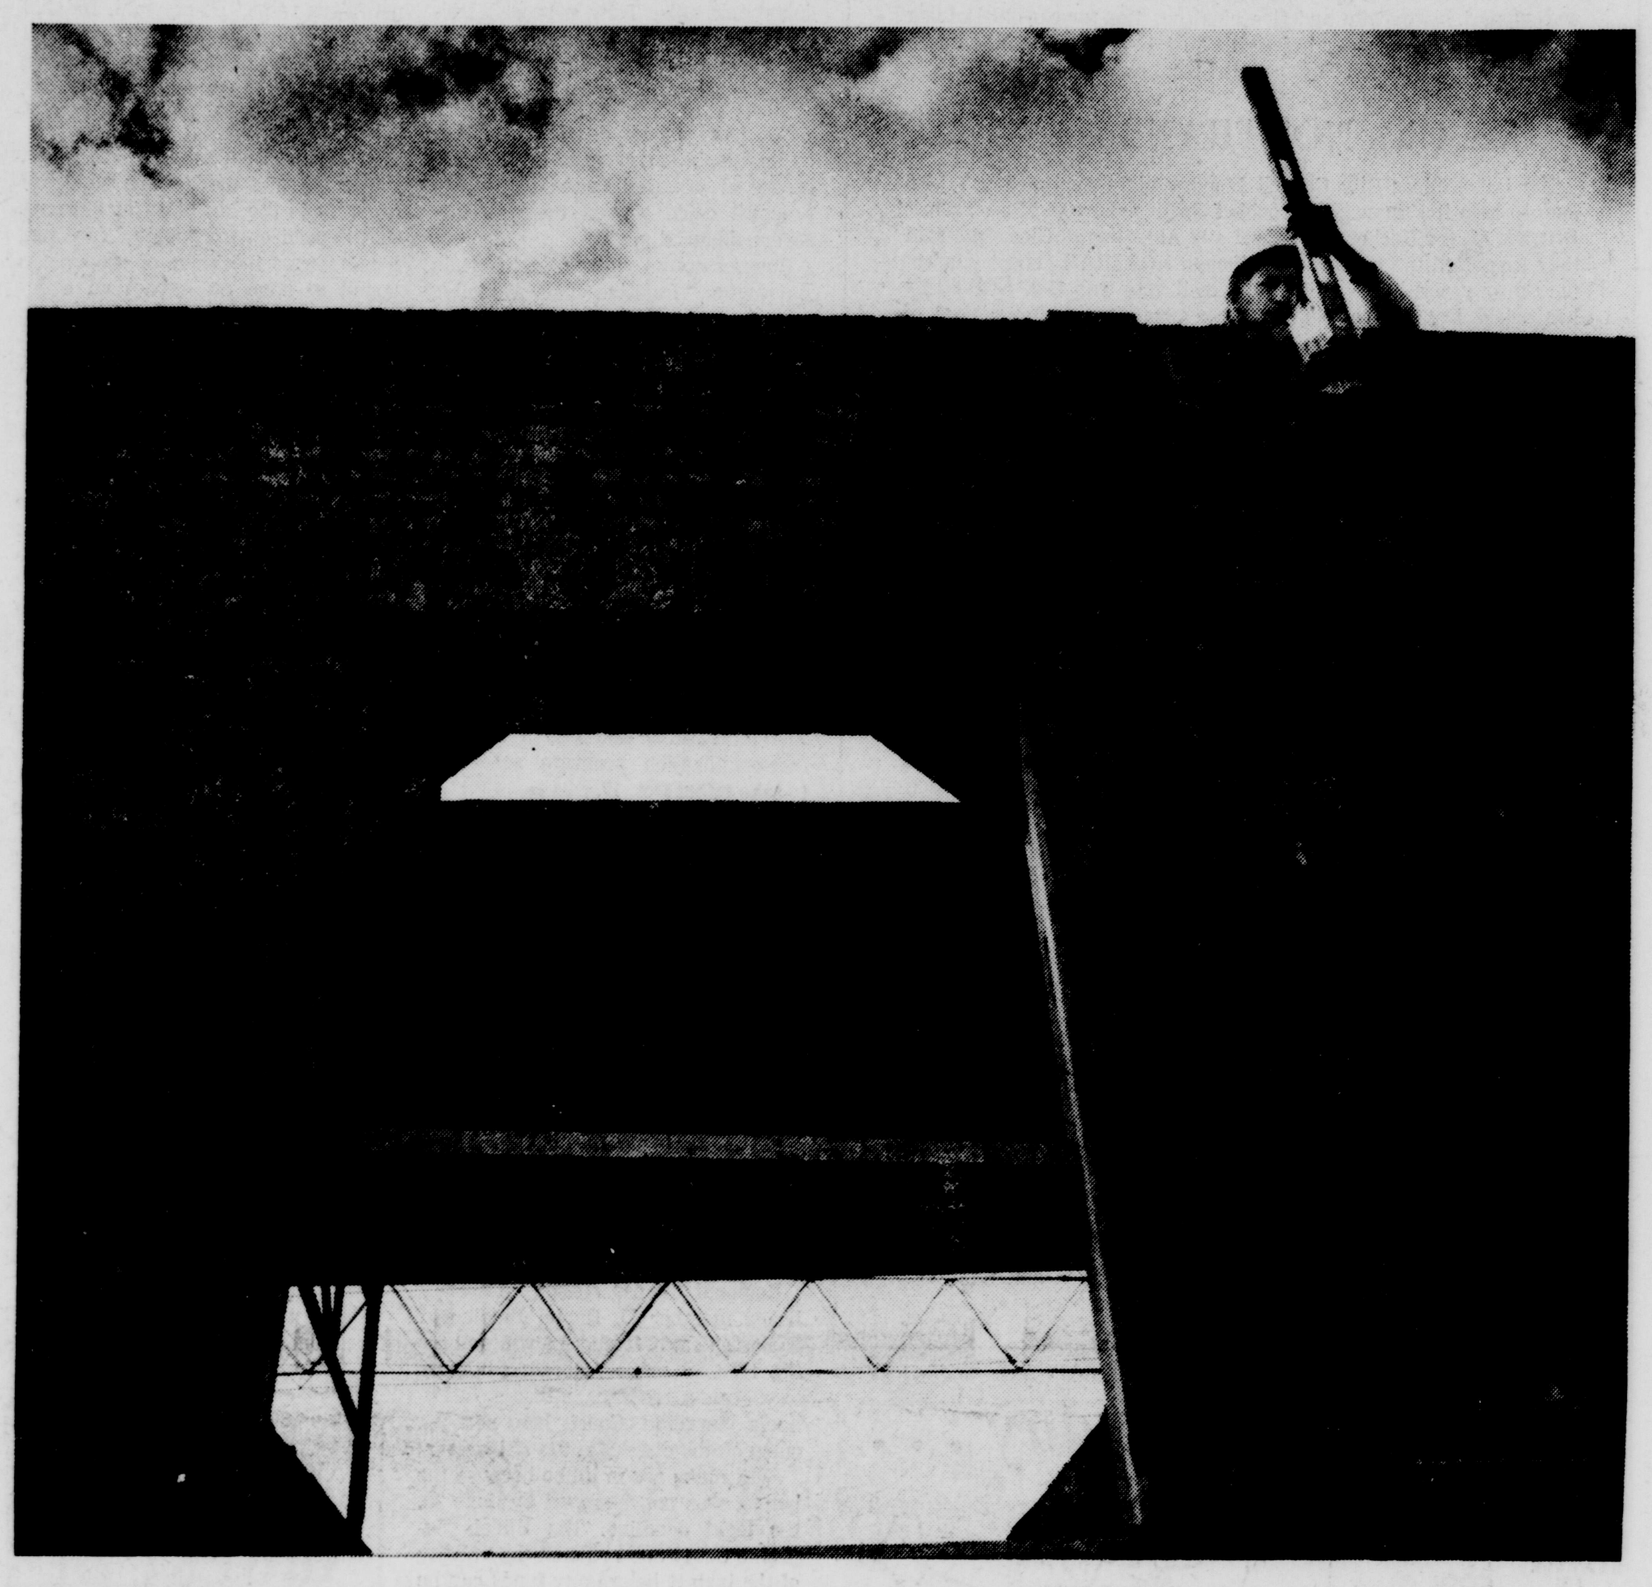

Work is continuing on the new Wheeling Town Hall at 1616 N. Arlington Heights Rd. with occupancy set for Nov. 1.

Construction has progressed to the second level of the two-story building, now estimated to cost more than $703,000. The town hall will be financed through federal revenue-sharing funds and $140,000 from the sale of the present town hall at 1818 E. Northwest Hwy.

Agencies to be housed there include the township offices, Northwest Mental Health Assn., Shelter, Inc., the Salvation Army's Community Counseling Center, Omni-House; Youth Services Bureau and storage space for the Arlington Heights Nurses' Club.

Construction of the building was delayed about 30 days because of complications caused by adding an elevator for handicapped persons as required by state law in all public buildings financed with federal funds.

The entire building lost between 75 and 80 square feet of space because of the self-service elevator, which cost $18,600.

WORK PROGRESSES to the second floor of the new Wheeling Town Hall, as a laborer uses a leveler on the masonry. A Nov. 1 occupancy has been projected for the several township agencies to be housed in the $703,400 building.

On panel agenda tonight

Flood basin alternatives studied

Two alternative proposals for an interim flood-control basin at the site of Lake Arlington will be considered tonight by the Citizens Action Committee Against Flooding.

The meeting is at 8 p.m. in the municipal building, 33 S. Arlington Heights Rd.

The interim basin is necessary to offset increased flooding along McDonald Creek near Windsor Drive that is expected to result from dredging of the creek channel, according to a report prepared by R. J. Peterson and Associates, village flooding engineers.

The proposed basin would not improve conditions downstream from Windsor Drive, but would prevent a worsening of the flooding situation, the report said.

One proposal calls for a $511,400 basin with a fully sodded bottom, an underdrain system and a small pumping station.

The cost could be reduced to an estimated $268,000 if the underdrain system and sodding were eliminated.

Trustee Frank Palmatier, chairman of the flooding committee, said the sodding and drain system may not be necessary because of the temporary nature of the proposed basin.

The committee also will review recently issued federal flood insurance maps. Palmatier said at first inspection, the maps do not differ greatly from existing maps of the local flood plains.

Uniform night hours for stores backed

Arlington Heights downtown merchants may be responsive to the establishment of uniform evening shopping hours for their businesses, according to a recent survey conducted by the Arlington Heights Chamber of Commerce.

The survey, which asked if downtown businessmen would agree to the same store hours, drew 38 responses from local merchants: 25 responded yes; five responded no and eight had no reply.

Earl Johnson, executive manager of the Chamber of Commerce, said he plans to assemble a representative group of village merchants together within the next two or three weeks to discuss uniform shopping hours, because thousands of village residents have expressed a desire for such a move.

In that meeting, Johnson said he hopes to develop some type of recommendation to present to all village merchants later this summer.

Monday brought relief and happiness for the relatives and friends of Northwest suburban residents caught by the killer flood near Loveland, Colo., but for several families there was no news and the passing time served only to heighten the anxiety.

Terri and Julie Pistone of Palatine had been camping with their family when the wall of mud and water came crashing down the Big Thompson canyon chasing them out of their car and up the mountainside.

"Oh, my God. The water was so high we had to run up the mountain. The road began sliding down into the river," said Terri Pistone, 18. The family was on its first camping trip when the incident occurred Saturday night.

HER PARENTS and three sisters were able to make their way to the rescue center in Loveland and were heading home to Palatine by bus Monday evening.

Meanwhile, another group of worried parents waited for word.

Jack and Virginia Parkin of Arlington Heights waited until Monday to begin seeking information about their 24-year-old son, Richard, his wife Candice, 21, of Hoffman Estates, and Richard and Carol Zoppe of Arlington Heights. They had left for the West Coast Friday evening for a long-planned vacation.

"They called from Loveland Saturday night to say they were going to spend the night," said Mrs. Parkin. They had not called home since then.

"WE DON'T have names like that on our lists here, but don't get excited — that does not mean anything," said one National Guardsman who was working with local authorities to coordinate information about the victims and survivors of the tragedy.

"They said they were tired and that they wanted to stop driving for awhile

Luzinski speaks softly — but can that bat shout out!

by ART MUGALIAN

Greg Luzinski will never put his foot in his mouth because his mouth is never open long enough.

The muscular cleanup hitter for the Philadelphia Phillies has a reputation for not talking that has spread for and wide beyond his one-time home of Prospect Heights. But let it never be said that Greg fails to get his point across.

"Luzinski is a leader," said his home-run-hitting teammate Mike Schmidt. "He's a leader by what he does, not what he says. He drives in runs; he wins games."

SCHMIDT TALKED Monday about the 6-foot-1, 230-pound goliath who follows him in the Phillie lineup, a lineup that is responsible for putting Philadelphia 13 games ahead of the rest of the National League East.

Today

"It sure helps to have him batting behind me," said Schmidt. "I get to see a lot of pitches I wouldn't ordinarily see."

Most pitchers would rather take their chances with the fuzzy-haired Schmidt than face Luzinski with one or more men on base.

Another observer who appreciates Luzinski is his manager, Danny Ozark, the odds-on-favorite for National League manager of the year.

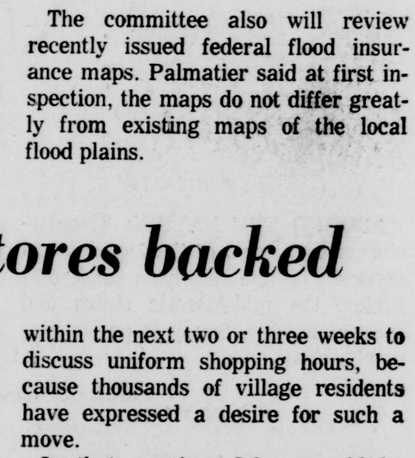

"GREG IS CONSISTENT," Ozark pointed out. "He does his job day in and day out — he never fails. He gets his hits. But it seems nobody ever notices him because he's so quiet. He never says much."

Luzinski talked Monday before a game with the Chicago Cubs at Wrigley Field. He talked about his career and his family and about the chances that the Phillies will be playing in a World Series this autumn.

Luzinski opened his mouth but he never once put his foot anywhere near it.

"Playing big league ball is super, great," said the 25-year-old Chicago-

Bond reduction mulled for DeLuca

Judge Philip Romiti said Monday he will consider a bond reduction request by accused slayer Frank DeLuca who is asking to have his bond lowered from $250,000 to $20,000. DeLuca and confidant Patricia Columbo, appeared in Romiti's Cook County Circuit courtroom Monday. The pair is accused of the brutal murders May 4 of Miss Columbo's parents and 13-year-old brother. Romiti, however, denied a request by the pair for a preliminary hearing to show probable cause for their arrest. DeLuca's attorneys said their client is seeking the bond reduction so he can return to work and support his ex-wife and five children. The 39-year-old DeLuca was a drugstore manager before his July 17 arrest. Romiti said he will deliver his decision Friday on the bond reduction request.

City OKs NORTRAN loan

The Des Plaines City Council Monday night approved a $37,000 loan to help the financially troubled North Suburban Mass Transit District. Mayor Herbert H. Behrel and Ald. George Olen, 2nd, said they supported the request even though NORTRAN cannot guarantee the city will be repaid. The council vote was 15-0. NORTRAN has asked Des Plaines and 20 other communities for a total of $300,000 in unsecured loans to ensure bus operations through Sept. 7. Wheeling has rejected the district's request for a loan, but Buffalo Grove officials Monday voted to loan the district up to $2,000 in weekly installments of $250. The loans are needed because the Regional Transportation Authority budget, which provides most of NORTRAN'S funding, was approved after it legal deadline and the courts must rule on its validity.

Driver test station near

The six-year wait for a Northwest suburban drivers testing center may be over before Sept. 1. The latest word from the Illinois Sec. of State's Office is the facility will open at 1231 E. Golf Rd. before the end of August. The state is leasing the facility from J. Emil Anderson and Son, owner of the Woodfield Commons commercial-office center. Originally the testing station was to have opened in May but state officials had neglected to seek approval of parking plans from Schaumburg officials. The opening of the facility culminates a six-year search for a Northwest suburban examining center.

$119,000 in loot recovered

Illinois Bureau of Investigation agents have recovered $119,000 in goods hijacked from a west suburban trucking firm and abandoned in Hanover Park. IBI spokesmen said thieves July 27 stole two tractor-trailer trucks valued at a total of $90,000 from Motor Express Inc. yards in west suburban Bedford Park. Taken in the thefts were 1,296 cases containing 7,776 gallons of anti-freeze valued at $29,000, an IBI spokesmen said. IBI agents, with Hanover Park and Bedford Park police reportedly recovered the loaded trucks in a field behind 10786 Lake St., Hanover Park, at 2 a.m. Sunday. IBI spokesman said it is unusual thieves had not "fenced" or sold the stolen goods before ditching the trucks. He said police found the trucks after receiving an anonymous telephone tip Saturday. IBI agents are continuing their investigation and reportedly plan to make arrests this week.

Schools fear property tax cut plan

School officials in the Northwest suburbs Monday expressed fears that Cook County Assessor Thomas Tully's plan to give homeowners a tax break will hurt school districts, and several administrators called Tully's proposal a pre-election political move by the Democrats.

Tully said homeowners in the Northwest suburbs face 30 to 40 per cent increases in their property assessments because of higher home values.

To avoid huge increases in residents' tax bills, Tully proposed lowering the rate for assessments from the current level of 22 per cent of market value to 16 per cent.

For local school districts counting on additional tax revenue from an increase of assessed valuation, Tully's proposal could worsen their already severe financial plight.

Reassessments are scheduled in Barrington, Palatine and Wheeling townships this year. Real estate in Schaumburg, Elk Grove, Hanover and Maine townships will be reassessed in 1977.

IF TULLY'S proposal is approved by the Cook County Board it would be a blow to anticipated revenue in Elk Grove Townshp Dist. 59, said Arthur Perry, director for financial planning and analysis.

"If the assessed valuation is to be reduced, it would affect us very much. You pay everything in dollars, not in tax rates," Perry said. He said if not enough money is realized through the assessments, Dist. 59 would need to ask for a larger tax rate or make cuts in its budget.

Arlington Heights Dist. 25 Supt. Donald Strong said, "The value of property is the life blood of agencies that depend on tax monies. Anything that changes the value of property is bound to have an impact on every taxing body in the county."

STRONG SAID THE 52 cents per $100 assessed valuation tax increase approved by Dist. 25 voters this spring could lose its effect through Tully's proposal, because the district might not bring in as many extra dollars as originally anticipated.

"If they drop the assessed valuation for homes they will have to bring up the valuation for business, industry and larger apartment units to make up the loss," said Kenneth Gill, superintendent in Wheeling-Buffalo Grove Dist. 21.

Despite the school officials' fears, Dennis Dunne, a Tully aide, said, "No school district in the area that will be reassessed will suffer a loss in revenue." Dunne said they just won't receive "the windfall they expected to get all in one year."

"IF PROPERTY IS increasing in value, an inflationary cycle is in effect. Governmental units can't keep on producing services if you drop the tax money coming into those units," Gill said.

J. C. Busenhart, assistant superintendent for business in Mount Prospect Dist. 57 said the proposal could be a political move. "It's an election year," Busenhart said. The politicians can say "see what the Democrats did," he said.

"I'm sure he (Tully) is trying to get on the good side of the taxpayer," said Vic Berner, controller in Schaumburg Township Dist. 54. "And you don't do that by raising taxes."

School officials said the impact of changes in the assessed valuation would depend on changes in the tax multiplier, a formula used to equalize the assessment rate of each county in the state.

Dist. 59's Perry said the multiplier should be increased to offset the lower assessed valuation proposed by Tully.

RTA calls for 10% fare increase

by LYNN ASINOF

The board of the financially strapped RTA Monday called for a 10 per cent areawide fare increase to become effective Sept. 5.

The fare hike would affect suburban bus lines, several commuter railroads and the Chicago Transit Authority. The increase is tied into a regional fare-equalization program scheduled to take effect Oct. 17.

Public hearings on both matters have been set for Aug. 23. The RTA board will make a final decision a week after the hearings.

THE PROPOSED fare hike is estimated to produce between $13.6 and $17.5 million during the remaining 10 months of the current fiscal year. If the hike is approved, fares on the CTA and most North Suburban Mass Transit District buses will increase from 45 to 50 cents.

Fares on the local NORTRAN routes in Des Plaines, however, will drop to 35 cents as a result of the proposed fare-equalization program.

The fare-equalization program is designed to allow most riders to travel throughout the region for a flat 60-cent fare. It would establish a base rate of 50 cents for most carriers, with a 10-cent transfer base that would enable riders to switch to another transit system.

Bus routes within a single community would have a 35-cent base fare and a 25-cent transfer.

The fare-equalization policy, as currently proposed, would not affect commuter railroads since two commuter lines, including the Chicago and North Western Ry., have not yet signed service contracts with the RTA.

SEVERAL RTA directors urged speedy action in creating the fare equalization on the commuter rail lines.

Under the proposed fare hike, rail fares on the north line of the Milwaukee Road would increase 5 cents for people using the Deerfield stop and 25 cents for people using the Northbrook stop in traveling to Chicago.

On the west line of the Milwaukee Road, one-way fares to Chicago would increase at the Itasca stop from $1.30 to $1.55, at the Medinah stop from $1.45 to $1.55, and at the Hanover Park stop from $1.65 to $1.85. Fares at the Roselle stop would not increase for one-way trips but monthly tickets would increase from $39.95 to $42.25.

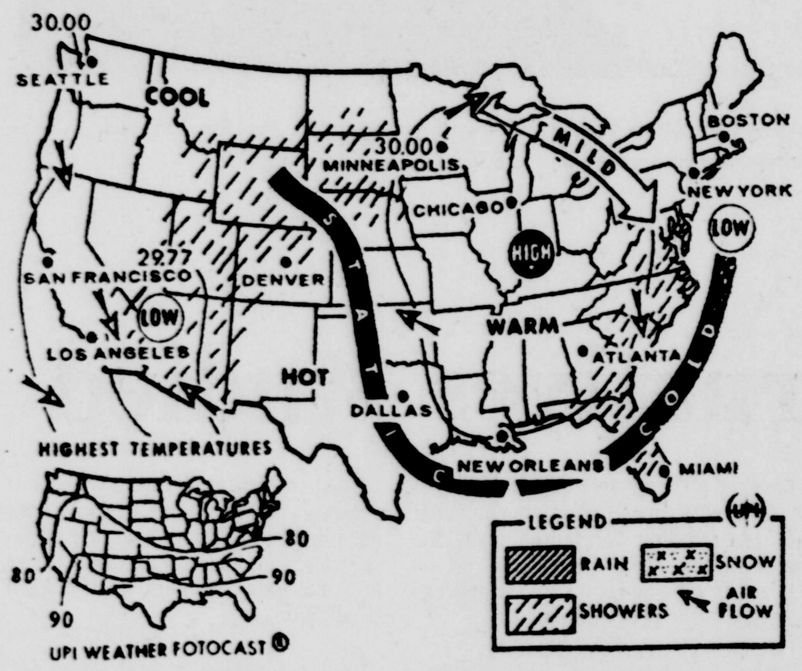

Emergency grants sought for bus lines

Regional Transportation Authority board member D. Daniel Baldino of Evanston said Monday he will call for the RTA to make emergency grants to suburban bus lines, although the Illinois Supreme Court has not yet ruled on the district's 1976-77 budget.

RTA funds are in limbo because the budget was not approved by June 30, the legal deadline. The Illinois Supreme Court must rule on the validity of the budget before any funds can be spent.

Baldino said he would be willing to risk personal liability for the grants, because suburban carriers are running out of operating funds without RTA money. The North Suburban Mass Transit District is already borrowing money from local communities to keep its North and Northwest suburban buses in operation.

Bond reduction mulled for DeLuca

Judge Philip Romiti said Monday he will consider a bond reduction request by accused slayer Frank DeLuca who is asking to have his bond lowered from $250,000 to $20,000. DeLuca and confidant Patricia Columbo, appeared in Romiti's Cook County Circuit courtroom Monday. The pair is accused of the brutal murders May 4 of Miss Columbo's parents and 13-year-old brother. Romiti, however, denied a request by the pair for a preliminary hearing to show probable cause for their arrest. DeLuca's attorneys said their client is seeking the bond reduction so he can return to work and support his ex-wife and five children. The 39-year-old DeLuca was a drugstore manager before his July 17 arrest. Romiti said he will deliver his decision Friday on the bond reduction request.

City OKs NORTRAN loan

The Des Plaines City Council Monday night approved a $37,000 loan to help the financially troubled North Suburban Mass Transit District. Mayor Herbert H. Behrel and Ald. George Olen, 2nd, said they supported the request even though NORTRAN cannot guarantee the city will be repaid. The council vote was 15-0. NORTRAN has asked Des Plaines and 20 other communities for a total of $300,000 in unsecured loans to ensure bus operations through Sept. 7. Wheeling has rejected the district's request for a loan, but Buffalo Grove officials Monday voted to loan the district up to $2,000 in weekly installments of $250. The loans are needed because the Regional Transportation Authority budget, which provides most of NORTRAN'S funding, was approved after it legal deadline and the courts must rule on its validity.

Driver test station near

The six-year wait for a Northwest suburban drivers testing center may be over before Sept. 1. The latest word from the Illinois Sec. of State's Office is the facility will open at 1231 E. Golf Rd. before the end of August. The state is leasing the facility from J. Emil Anderson and Son, owner of the Woodfield Commons commercial-office center. Originally the testing station was to have opened in May but state officials had neglected to seek approval of parking plans from Schaumburg officials. The opening of the facility culminates a six-year search for a Northwest suburban examining center.

$119,000 in loot recovered

Illinois Bureau of Investigation agents have recovered $119,000 in goods hijacked from a west suburban trucking firm and abandoned in Hanover Park. IBI spokesmen said thieves July 27 stole two tractor-trailer trucks valued at a total of $90,000 from Motor Express Inc. yards in west suburban Bedford Park. Taken in the thefts were 1,296 cases containing 7,776 gallons of anti-freeze valued at $29,000, an IBI spokesmen said. IBI agents, with Hanover Park and Bedford Park police reportedly recovered the loaded trucks in a field behind 10786 Lake St., Hanover Park, at 2 a.m. Sunday. IBI spokesman said it is unusual thieves had not "fenced" or sold the stolen goods before ditching the trucks. He said police found the trucks after receiving an anonymous telephone tip Saturday. IBI agents are continuing their investigation and reportedly plan to make arrests this week.

Schools fear property tax cut plan

School officials in the Northwest suburbs Monday expressed fears that Cook County Assessor Thomas Tully's plan to give homeowners a tax break will hurt school districts, and several administrators called Tully's proposal a pre-election political move by the Democrats.

Tully said homeowners in the Northwest suburbs face 30 to 40 per cent increases in their property assessments because of higher home values.

To avoid huge increases in residents' tax bills, Tully proposed lowering the rate for assessments from the current level of 22 per cent of market value to 16 per cent.

For local school districts counting on additional tax revenue from an increase of assessed valuation, Tully's proposal could worsen their already severe financial plight.

Reassessments are scheduled in Barrington, Palatine and Wheeling townships this year. Real estate in Schaumburg, Elk Grove, Hanover and Maine townships will be reassessed in 1977.

IF TULLY'S proposal is approved by the Cook County Board it would be a blow to anticipated revenue in Elk Grove Townshp Dist. 59, said Arthur Perry, director for financial planning and analysis.

"If the assessed valuation is to be reduced, it would affect us very much. You pay everything in dollars, not in tax rates," Perry said. He said if not enough money is realized through the assessments, Dist. 59 would need to ask for a larger tax rate or make cuts in its budget.

Arlington Heights Dist. 25 Supt. Donald Strong said, "The value of property is the life blood of agencies that depend on tax monies. Anything that changes the value of property is bound to have an impact on every taxing body in the county."

STRONG SAID THE 52 cents per $100 assessed valuation tax increase approved by Dist. 25 voters this spring could lose its effect through Tully's proposal, because the district might not bring in as many extra dollars as originally anticipated.

"If they drop the assessed valuation for homes they will have to bring up the valuation for business, industry and larger apartment units to make up the loss," said Kenneth Gill, superintendent in Wheeling-Buffalo Grove Dist. 21.

Despite the school officials' fears, Dennis Dunne, a Tully aide, said, "No school district in the area that will be reassessed will suffer a loss in revenue." Dunne said they just won't receive "the windfall they expected to get all in one year."

"IF PROPERTY IS increasing in value, an inflationary cycle is in effect. Governmental units can't keep on producing services if you drop the tax money coming into those units," Gill said.

J. C. Busenhart, assistant superintendent for business in Mount Prospect Dist. 57 said the proposal could be a political move. "It's an election year," Busenhart said. The politicians can say "see what the Democrats did," he said.

"I'm sure he (Tully) is trying to get on the good side of the taxpayer," said Vic Berner, controller in Schaumburg Township Dist. 54. "And you don't do that by raising taxes."

School officials said the impact of changes in the assessed valuation would depend on changes in the tax multiplier, a formula used to equalize the assessment rate of each county in the state.

Dist. 59's Perry said the multiplier should be increased to offset the lower assessed valuation proposed by Tully.

RTA calls for 10% fare increase

by LYNN ASINOF

The board of the financially strapped RTA Monday called for a 10 per cent areawide fare increase to become effective Sept. 5.

The fare hike would affect suburban bus lines, several commuter railroads and the Chicago Transit Authority. The increase is tied into a regional fare-equalization program scheduled to take effect Oct. 17.

Public hearings on both matters have been set for Aug. 23. The RTA board will make a final decision a week after the hearings.

THE PROPOSED fare hike is estimated to produce between $13.6 and $17.5 million during the remaining 10 months of the current fiscal year. If the hike is approved, fares on the CTA and most North Suburban Mass Transit District buses will increase from 45 to 50 cents.

Fares on the local NORTRAN routes in Des Plaines, however, will drop to 35 cents as a result of the proposed fare-equalization program.

The fare-equalization program is designed to allow most riders to travel throughout the region for a flat 60-cent fare. It would establish a base rate of 50 cents for most carriers, with a 10-cent transfer base that would enable riders to switch to another transit system.

Bus routes within a single community would have a 35-cent base fare and a 25-cent transfer.

The fare-equalization policy, as currently proposed, would not affect commuter railroads since two commuter lines, including the Chicago and North Western Ry., have not yet signed service contracts with the RTA.

SEVERAL RTA directors urged speedy action in creating the fare equalization on the commuter rail lines.

Under the proposed fare hike, rail fares on the north line of the Milwaukee Road would increase 5 cents for people using the Deerfield stop and 25 cents for people using the Northbrook stop in traveling to Chicago.

On the west line of the Milwaukee Road, one-way fares to Chicago would increase at the Itasca stop from $1.30 to $1.55, at the Medinah stop from $1.45 to $1.55, and at the Hanover Park stop from $1.65 to $1.85. Fares at the Roselle stop would not increase for one-way trips but monthly tickets would increase from $39.95 to $42.25.

Emergency grants sought for bus lines

Regional Transportation Authority board member D. Daniel Baldino of Evanston said Monday he will call for the RTA to make emergency grants to suburban bus lines, although the Illinois Supreme Court has not yet ruled on the district's 1976-77 budget.

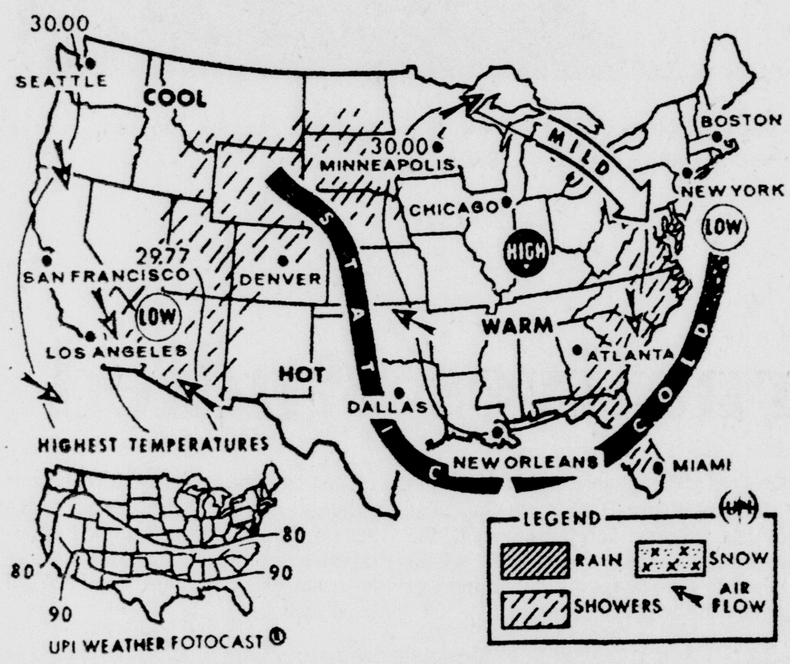

RTA funds are in limbo because the budget was not approved by June 30, the legal deadline. The Illinois Supreme Court must rule on the validity of the budget before any funds can be spent.

Baldino said he would be willing to risk personal liability for the grants, because suburban carriers are running out of operating funds without RTA money. The North Suburban Mass Transit District is already borrowing money from local communities to keep its North and Northwest suburban buses in operation.

Mystery illness takes lives of 16

HARRISBURG, Pa. (UPI) — A mysterious illness that struck its victims within a week of the first symptoms has killed 16 Pennsylvanians who attended a state American Legion Convention in Philadelphia last month.

At least 35 other persons who attended the convention were hospitalized. A Legion official said more than 2,000 delegates and a larger number of visitors came to the July 21-24 convention from around the state.

State Health Sec. Leonard Bachman Monday ordered an immediate investigation to pinpoint the cause of the disease — apparently a virus.

"We can see no cause for any panic of any sort at this time," Bachman said.

"We don't know what we're dealing with," he said. "I don't think we can take any precautions at this stage until we can find out what we are dealing with."

The National Center For Disease Control in Atlanta sent three epidemiologists to Pennsylvania at the request of Pennsylvania Health authorities.

Epidemiologists are doctors specially trained in tracking down the causes of contagious diseases and how they are spread.

The CDC said one will go to Philadelphia, where the illness apparently was contracted, and the two others will go to Harrisburg to join investigators of the Pennsylvania Dept. of Public Health.

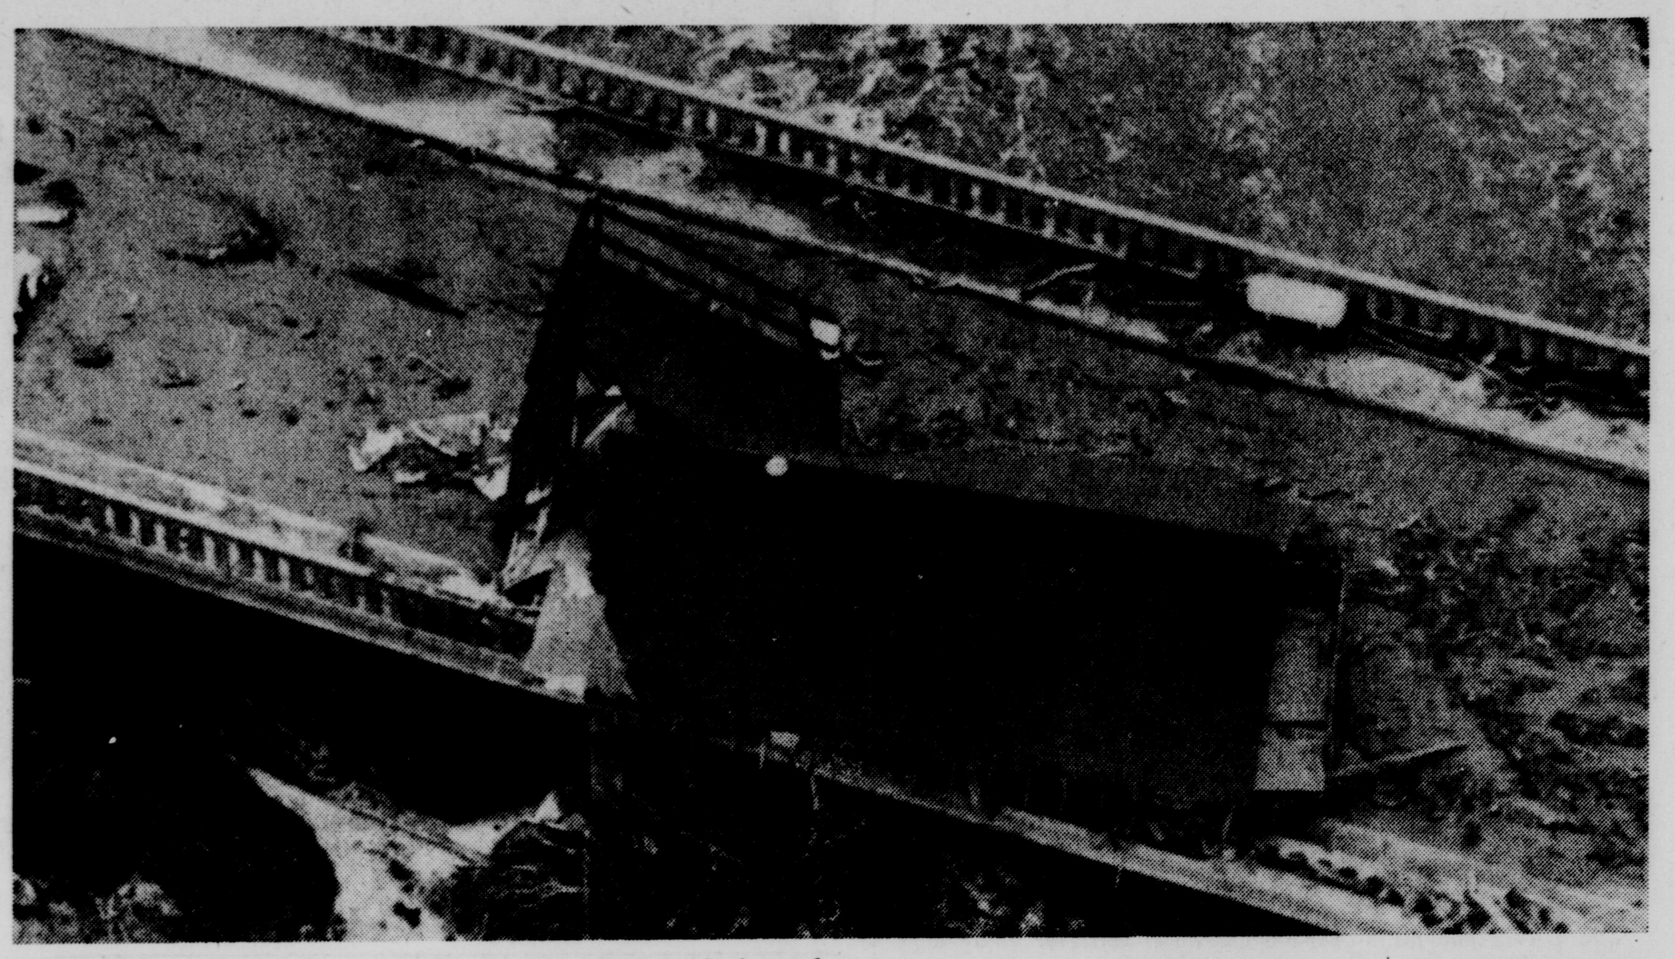

Bachman said the disease "certainly resembles a virus rather than any other cause." He said "swine flu is a possibility," but stressed it was too early to speculate.

Bachman said the department had tissues of the victims flown to the state laboratories in Philadelphia for analysis. He said it could take up to three days to identify a virus.

Edward Hoak, Pennsylvania American Legion adjutant, said he began receiving reports of the deaths and illnesses during the weekend.

"The one thing they all had in common was that they went to the convention in Philadelphia," Hoak said.

He said the virus started out with symptoms similar to a common cold, then progressed to severe headaches and high temperatures.

Death toll now at 76; 500 stranded

by CHARLES J. CANNON

LOVELAND, Colo. (UPI) — Rescue teams struggled Monday into the Big Thompson Canyon to bring out survivors and more bodies from Colorado's "flood of the century." Four helicopters also reached the disaster in a letup of the stormy weather.

Gov. Richard Lamm set the death toll at 76, but disaster officials said it would probably go higher.

"I can't give any figures on loss of life or damage," Lamm said in Denver. "The last I got was 76 bodies confirmed."

A 10-foot wall of water surged through the canyon crowded with scores of weekend campers and fishermen after a freak thunderstorm Saturday night. But late Monday, 500 persons still were marooned along a 35-mile stretch of the river.

None was in danger in the six-story deep canyon at an elevation of 10,000 feet in the northern Colorado Rockies.

Lamm told a news conference that Weather Bureau officials predicted the next 24 hours would be best for rescue operations. Lamm said another front was forecast to reach the area by late today.

Helicopters were grounded most of Monday because of fog, rain and thick clouds which hovered over the canyon 45 miles northwest of Denver. But late in the day, the clouds lifted enough for several helicopters to make a brief tour of the area, picking up one 70-year-old woman diabetic, Helen Avery of Little Rock, Ark.

Rescue teams with horses entered the canyon from Estes Park, in the west or from the upriver side of the gorge. Others aboard four-wheel-drive vehicles tried to squeeze in from the north, bypassing the waist-deep mud and piles of debris that clogged the southern entrance near this city of 20,000.

Lamm said unconfirmed reports from residents of Boulder, a Denver suburb, indicated cloud seeding operations might have been conducted in the Big Thompson Canyon area before the storm. He said the witnesses, who were not identified, claimed to have pictures of the "sunburst" effects associated with cloudseeding.

Federal officials denied seeding operations took place and Larimer County Sheriff Bob Watson said he was unaware of the reports.

"I don't know anything about it but if I find the guy who did it, I'd like to talk to him," Watson said.

"If it was God, I'd like to talk to him, too. We aren't getting along too well now because of the rain."

The U.S. Geological Survey said the thunderstorm that triggered the flash flood was the freak type of storm occurring perhaps only once every century. Ironically, it hit on Colorado's 100th anniversary of statehood.

Watson said officials decided to release some water stored behind the Mt. Olympus dam which was overflowing near Estes Park. He said there was no danger of the dam rupturing but the release would raise the level of the Big Thompson, making rescue operations more difficult.

Officials also anxiously watched the rising Cache la Poudre River, which runs parallel to the Big Thompson about 20 miles to the north. Two reservoirs fed by the Poudre which supply drinking water to Fort Collins, a city of 30,000, were also full and overflowing.

Survivors told of hearing the flood roar "like a jet airplane" and watching victims swept to their death.

Two-thirds of the bodies recovered were women. Only a few were children, leading authorities to believe more youngsters were missing and dead.

President Ford declared Larimer County a disaster area at the request of the governor.

'Miracle baby' survives

LOVELAND, Colo. (UPI) — Survivors of the Big Thompson Canyon flood described a 5-month-old baby found partially clad and crying on a rock in the middle of the roaring Big Thompson River as the "miracle boy."

The infant's identity still was not known Monday. He was plucked from the rock Sunday and brought to Loveland to be checked by doctors. A member of the search team which found the boy said he appeared in good condition.

An official said the child's parents may have placed him on the rack for safety before being carried away by the floodwaters.

"They (searchers) had no idea how he got there," said a sheriff's spokesman. "He might have been washed onto the rock by the water or he might have been placed there by someone who then was swept away.

"It's just a miracle he was there at all."

The flooding occurred Saturday night and Sunday and at least 76 persons were killed. Authorities said the dead ranged in age from 3 to 65. All the bodies recovered were taken to a makeshift morgue in Loveland.

"We have three to five bodies of children under 17," said Sheriff Bob Watson. He said two girls killed in the flood "were 3 and 5."

Watson said he expected searchers would find additional bodies of infants and older children, partially because women outnumbered men among the first corpses found.

Flood fears still alive for some

said Candice's mother, Mrs. Donald Fencil of Chicago. She said the two couples were traveling in a Chevy van heading for Disneyland and Los Angeles.

Mrs. Fencil said she had talked with her daughter briefly and could not recall exactly where they said they had planned to camp, wishing now she knew their exact location.

"They had been looking forward to this trip so much," Mrs. Parkin added.

Friends of the Pistones' were relieved when they heard they escaped the disaster that had taken the lives of at least 76 persons. One neighbor said the novice campers had planned to head north to Wyoming after their visit in Colorado.

"THEY WEREN'T experienced campers. I think this was their first trip," said Mrs. Louis Brandenburg, a neighbor who lives near the Pistones in the 900 block of E. Slayton Street in Palatine.

After hearing the family was safe and headed home, Mrs. Brandenburg predicted Mrs. Rae Pistone would not be camping again. Rescue officials at Loveland said John, 41, an executive with Sears, Roebuck and Co. and a deacon at St. Thomas of Villanova Church, his wife and daughters, Terri, Julie, 17, Kathy, 16, and Gia, 9, should be home today. The three oldest girls are students at Palatine High School, while Gia attends Jane Addams School.

Rescue efforts were hampered by more bad weather Monday and crews were forced to travel by foot through the disaster scene to look for persons.

Parkin told The Herald that friends had said his son had planned to go to the Estes Park area, north of the major devastation.

Heavy rains called a freak

LOVELAND, Colo. (UPI) — A National Weather Service meteorologist Monday said the torrential rains responsible for the Big Thompson River flood were a freak of nature.

More than 60 persons drowned in the weekend disaster. According to the weather service, more than 10 inches of rain fell in areas of the 35-mile long canyon in just a few hours.

"We don't get very many of those kinds of storms here in Colorado or even across the nation every year," meteorologist Maury Pautz said.

"It is unusual to get that heavy a rainfall in that short a time. In this case, currents in the upper air were weak and weren't moving."

Pautz said the thunderstorms which produced the rains began Saturday night after a mass of moist Gulf of Mexico air moved across the Continental Divide and stalled.

The outer edges of the storm system also produced rains in portions of Wyoming and western Kansas. Streams in northcentral and southern Wyoming ran high and some flooding of cropland and campgrounds was reported but no one was injured.

Corky Rogers, the executive director of the chamber of commerce at Estes Park at the headwaters of the Big Thompson River, said the area was hit with rains nearly every day last week and said Saturday's downpour "was like the straw which broke the camel's back."

"As far as the Big Thompson Canyon area, it (the front) just seemed to concentrate over that area for some reason," said Pautz, a 15-year veteran of the weather service. "We had thunderstorms up and down the (Rocky Mountain) range."

He said the local heavy rains were similar to the front blamed for the Rapid City, S.D., floods in June 1972. That flood killed 240 persons.

U.S food export policy criticized

An American bishop Monday criticized the United States' food export policy, saying it was designed to feed cash registers rather than the world's hungry. "A fundamental conflict presently exists between the right to food for persons in need and the right to sell by agricultural merchants," Bishop James Rausch of Washington, D.C., told 4,000 persons attending a symposium at the Catholic Church's 41st International Eucharistic Congress in Philadelphia. "U.S. food policy today clearly gives higher priority to the latter right," he said.

Court eases air pollution curbs

The Environmental Protection Agency's proposal to ease air pollution restrictions in specified areas, in the interest of community growth, won unanimous approval Monday from a three-judge federal court in Washington. The panel of the U.S. Court of Appeals rejected a challenge of the new EPA regulations by utilities, the Sierra Club and the American Petroleum Institute. The opinion said the formula balances the need for clean air with needs for continued community development. The regulations, formally approved by EPA last year, allow states to divide communities into three categories when deciding whether to permit increased air pollution in areas having cleaner air.

Harrises' judge rejects mistrial plea

The judge in the trial of William and Emily Harris Monday in Los Angeles sternly rejected defense motions that he disqualify himself, declare a mistrial and dismiss the jurors already considering a verdict in the case. Superior Court Judge Mark Brandler ruled the testimony of two prospective women jurors that they overheard a man seated on the panel make remarks indicating he was prejudiced had lacked credibility. The seven-woman, five-man jury went ahead with a third day of deliberations in the kidnap-murder-assault case against the one-time Symbionese Liberation Army abductors of Patricia Hearst, unaware that one of their members was under fire from the defense.

Reagan gains only 3 more delegates

The long awaited announcement by Ronald Reagan's campaign manager as to his candidate's hidden strength showed Monday a net gain of only three delegates and no losses from President Ford's column. But Reagan campaign manager John Sears, who said two weeks ago Reagan had more than the 1,130 delegates needed to win the presidential nomination, promised to announce further additions to Reagan's strength between now and the opening of the national convention in Kansas City Aug. 16. The latest UPI delegate count showed Ford with 1,122 delegates, Reagan with 1,031 and 106 uncommitted.

Senate defeats $1 billion defense cut

The Senate Monday defeated liberal moves to cut $1 billion from a $104 billion defense bill and delay spending another $274 million for 60 extra strategic missiles. The Senate voted down, 63 to 27, what opponents called a "meat axe" $1 billion cut in defense spending proposed by Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton.

Refugee camp to be evacuated today

An Arab mediator said Monday Christians agreed in writing to the evacuation of wounded from the Tal Zaatar refugee camp today. But the truce was threatened by the kidnap-slaying of a Christian politician. Arab League Envoy Hassan Sabry el Kholy said the agreement to permit Red Cross rescue of an estimated 4,000 wounded from Tal Zaatar, would be "the first step" in implementing an over-all truce called for in a pact signed by Syria and the Palestine Liberation Organization last week. The kidnap-murder of Khalil Salem, Christian director of Lebanon's defunct finance ministry, raised fears violent Christian reprisals could wreck peace prospects. Leftist militiamen reported finding Salem's bullet-riddled corpse wrapped in a blanket in the trunk of his car Monday, three days after he was abducted in a Moslem-controlled sector of Beirut. Salem was Greek Orthodox.

Fear fate of 2 Britons seized as spies

Uganda Monday denied all knowledge of two Britons reportedly arrested as spies, and diplomatic sources expressed fear the two may already be dead. Ugandan Pres. Idi Amin has not responded to an official inquiry from French Ambassador Pierre Renard for information about the missing Britons, diplomatic sources said. Renard is handling British affairs in Kampala after Britain's decision to break relations with Uganda. According to diplomatic sources, Briton Graham Clegg, 38, was arrested July 27 in eastern Uganda and a friend, Jack Tulley, 65, was picked up when he enquired about Clegg. Both were later transferred to Kampala on spying charges.

At least 35 other persons who attended the convention were hospitalized. A Legion official said more than 2,000 delegates and a larger number of visitors came to the July 21-24 convention from around the state.

State Health Sec. Leonard Bachman Monday ordered an immediate investigation to pinpoint the cause of the disease — apparently a virus.

"We can see no cause for any panic of any sort at this time," Bachman said.

"We don't know what we're dealing with," he said. "I don't think we can take any precautions at this stage until we can find out what we are dealing with."

The National Center For Disease Control in Atlanta sent three epidemiologists to Pennsylvania at the request of Pennsylvania Health authorities.

Epidemiologists are doctors specially trained in tracking down the causes of contagious diseases and how they are spread.

The CDC said one will go to Philadelphia, where the illness apparently was contracted, and the two others will go to Harrisburg to join investigators of the Pennsylvania Dept. of Public Health.

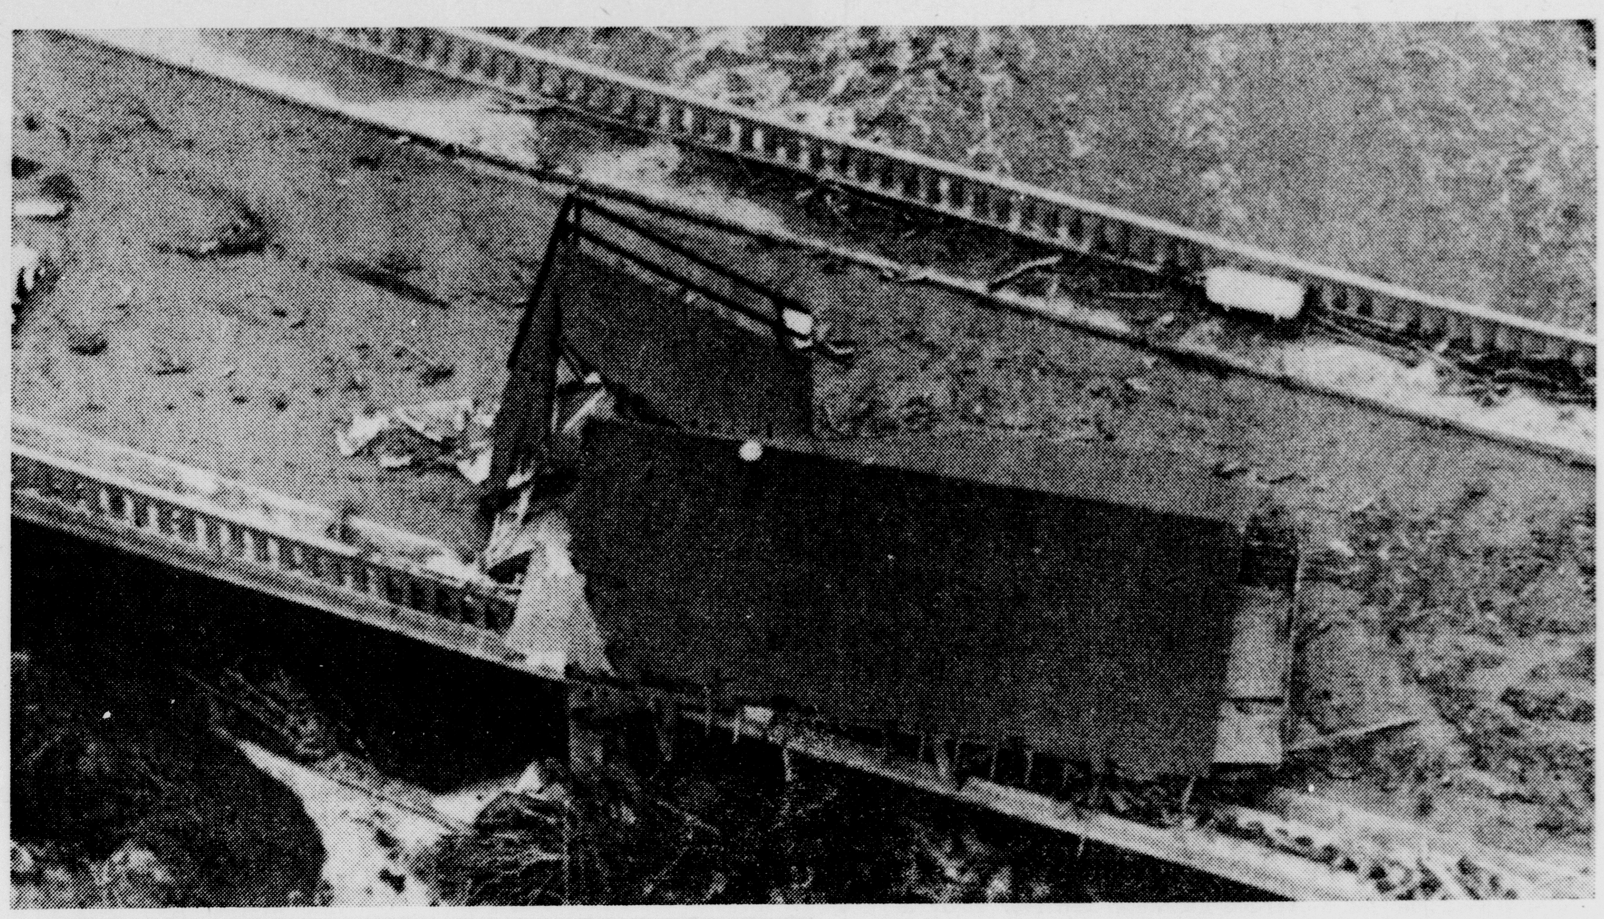

Bachman said the disease "certainly resembles a virus rather than any other cause." He said "swine flu is a possibility," but stressed it was too early to speculate.

Bachman said the department had tissues of the victims flown to the state laboratories in Philadelphia for analysis. He said it could take up to three days to identify a virus.

Edward Hoak, Pennsylvania American Legion adjutant, said he began receiving reports of the deaths and illnesses during the weekend.

"The one thing they all had in common was that they went to the convention in Philadelphia," Hoak said.

He said the virus started out with symptoms similar to a common cold, then progressed to severe headaches and high temperatures.

Death toll now at 76; 500 stranded

by CHARLES J. CANNON

LOVELAND, Colo. (UPI) — Rescue teams struggled Monday into the Big Thompson Canyon to bring out survivors and more bodies from Colorado's "flood of the century." Four helicopters also reached the disaster in a letup of the stormy weather.

Gov. Richard Lamm set the death toll at 76, but disaster officials said it would probably go higher.

"I can't give any figures on loss of life or damage," Lamm said in Denver. "The last I got was 76 bodies confirmed."

A 10-foot wall of water surged through the canyon crowded with scores of weekend campers and fishermen after a freak thunderstorm Saturday night. But late Monday, 500 persons still were marooned along a 35-mile stretch of the river.

None was in danger in the six-story deep canyon at an elevation of 10,000 feet in the northern Colorado Rockies.

Lamm told a news conference that Weather Bureau officials predicted the next 24 hours would be best for rescue operations. Lamm said another front was forecast to reach the area by late today.

Helicopters were grounded most of Monday because of fog, rain and thick clouds which hovered over the canyon 45 miles northwest of Denver. But late in the day, the clouds lifted enough for several helicopters to make a brief tour of the area, picking up one 70-year-old woman diabetic, Helen Avery of Little Rock, Ark.

Rescue teams with horses entered the canyon from Estes Park, in the west or from the upriver side of the gorge. Others aboard four-wheel-drive vehicles tried to squeeze in from the north, bypassing the waist-deep mud and piles of debris that clogged the southern entrance near this city of 20,000.

Lamm said unconfirmed reports from residents of Boulder, a Denver suburb, indicated cloud seeding operations might have been conducted in the Big Thompson Canyon area before the storm. He said the witnesses, who were not identified, claimed to have pictures of the "sunburst" effects associated with cloudseeding.

Federal officials denied seeding operations took place and Larimer County Sheriff Bob Watson said he was unaware of the reports.

"I don't know anything about it but if I find the guy who did it, I'd like to talk to him," Watson said.

"If it was God, I'd like to talk to him, too. We aren't getting along too well now because of the rain."

The U.S. Geological Survey said the thunderstorm that triggered the flash flood was the freak type of storm occurring perhaps only once every century. Ironically, it hit on Colorado's 100th anniversary of statehood.

Watson said officials decided to release some water stored behind the Mt. Olympus dam which was overflowing near Estes Park. He said there was no danger of the dam rupturing but the release would raise the level of the Big Thompson, making rescue operations more difficult.

Officials also anxiously watched the rising Cache la Poudre River, which runs parallel to the Big Thompson about 20 miles to the north. Two reservoirs fed by the Poudre which supply drinking water to Fort Collins, a city of 30,000, were also full and overflowing.

Survivors told of hearing the flood roar "like a jet airplane" and watching victims swept to their death.

Two-thirds of the bodies recovered were women. Only a few were children, leading authorities to believe more youngsters were missing and dead.

President Ford declared Larimer County a disaster area at the request of the governor.

'Miracle baby' survives

LOVELAND, Colo. (UPI) — Survivors of the Big Thompson Canyon flood described a 5-month-old baby found partially clad and crying on a rock in the middle of the roaring Big Thompson River as the "miracle boy."

The infant's identity still was not known Monday. He was plucked from the rock Sunday and brought to Loveland to be checked by doctors. A member of the search team which found the boy said he appeared in good condition.

An official said the child's parents may have placed him on the rack for safety before being carried away by the floodwaters.

"They (searchers) had no idea how he got there," said a sheriff's spokesman. "He might have been washed onto the rock by the water or he might have been placed there by someone who then was swept away.

"It's just a miracle he was there at all."

The flooding occurred Saturday night and Sunday and at least 76 persons were killed. Authorities said the dead ranged in age from 3 to 65. All the bodies recovered were taken to a makeshift morgue in Loveland.

"We have three to five bodies of children under 17," said Sheriff Bob Watson. He said two girls killed in the flood "were 3 and 5."

Watson said he expected searchers would find additional bodies of infants and older children, partially because women outnumbered men among the first corpses found.

Flood fears still alive for some said Candice's mother, Mrs. Donald Fencil of Chicago. She said the two couples were traveling in a Chevy van heading for Disneyland and Los Angeles.

Mrs. Fencil said she had talked with her daughter briefly and could not recall exactly where they said they had planned to camp, wishing now she knew their exact location.

"They had been looking forward to this trip so much," Mrs. Parkin added.

Friends of the Pistones' were relieved when they heard they escaped the disaster that had taken the lives of at least 76 persons. One neighbor said the novice campers had planned to head north to Wyoming after their visit in Colorado.

"THEY WEREN'T experienced campers. I think this was their first trip," said Mrs. Louis Brandenburg, a neighbor who lives near the Pistones in the 900 block of E. Slayton Street in Palatine.

After hearing the family was safe and headed home, Mrs. Brandenburg predicted Mrs. Rae Pistone would not be camping again. Rescue officials at Loveland said John, 41, an executive with Sears, Roebuck and Co. and a deacon at St. Thomas of Villanova Church, his wife and daughters, Terri, Julie, 17, Kathy, 16, and Gia, 9, should be home today. The three oldest girls are students at Palatine High School, while Gia attends Jane Addams School.

Rescue efforts were hampered by more bad weather Monday and crews were forced to travel by foot through the disaster scene to look for persons.

Parkin told The Herald that friends had said his son had planned to go to the Estes Park area, north of the major devastation.

Heavy rains called a freak

LOVELAND, Colo. (UPI) — A National Weather Service meteorologist Monday said the torrential rains responsible for the Big Thompson River flood were a freak of nature.

More than 60 persons drowned in the weekend disaster. According to the weather service, more than 10 inches of rain fell in areas of the 35-mile long canyon in just a few hours.

"We don't get very many of those kinds of storms here in Colorado or even across the nation every year," meteorologist Maury Pautz said.

"It is unusual to get that heavy a rainfall in that short a time. In this case, currents in the upper air were weak and weren't moving."

Pautz said the thunderstorms which produced the rains began Saturday night after a mass of moist Gulf of Mexico air moved across the Continental Divide and stalled.

The outer edges of the storm system also produced rains in portions of Wyoming and western Kansas. Streams in northcentral and southern Wyoming ran high and some flooding of cropland and campgrounds was reported but no one was injured.

Corky Rogers, the executive director of the chamber of commerce at Estes Park at the headwaters of the Big Thompson River, said the area was hit with rains nearly every day last week and said Saturday's downpour "was like the straw which broke the camel's back."

"As far as the Big Thompson Canyon area, it (the front) just seemed to concentrate over that area for some reason," said Pautz, a 15-year veteran of the weather service. "We had thunderstorms up and down the (Rocky Mountain) range."

He said the local heavy rains were similar to the front blamed for the Rapid City, S.D., floods in June 1972. That flood killed 240 persons.

U.S food export policy criticized

An American bishop Monday criticized the United States' food export policy, saying it was designed to feed cash registers rather than the world's hungry. "A fundamental conflict presently exists between the right to food for persons in need and the right to sell by agricultural merchants," Bishop James Rausch of Washington, D.C., told 4,000 persons attending a symposium at the Catholic Church's 41st International Eucharistic Congress in Philadelphia. "U.S. food policy today clearly gives higher priority to the latter right," he said.

Court eases air pollution curbs

The Environmental Protection Agency's proposal to ease air pollution restrictions in specified areas, in the interest of community growth, won unanimous approval Monday from a three-judge federal court in Washington. The panel of the U.S. Court of Appeals rejected a challenge of the new EPA regulations by utilities, the Sierra Club and the American Petroleum Institute. The opinion said the formula balances the need for clean air with needs for continued community development. The regulations, formally approved by EPA last year, allow states to divide communities into three categories when deciding whether to permit increased air pollution in areas having cleaner air.

Harrises' judge rejects mistrial plea

The judge in the trial of William and Emily Harris Monday in Los Angeles sternly rejected defense motions that he disqualify himself, declare a mistrial and dismiss the jurors already considering a verdict in the case. Superior Court Judge Mark Brandler ruled the testimony of two prospective women jurors that they overheard a man seated on the panel make remarks indicating he was prejudiced had lacked credibility. The seven-woman, five-man jury went ahead with a third day of deliberations in the kidnap-murder-assault case against the one-time Symbionese Liberation Army abductors of Patricia Hearst, unaware that one of their members was under fire from the defense.

Reagan gains only 3 more delegates

The long awaited announcement by Ronald Reagan's campaign manager as to his candidate's hidden strength showed Monday a net gain of only three delegates and no losses from President Ford's column. But Reagan campaign manager John Sears, who said two weeks ago Reagan had more than the 1,130 delegates needed to win the presidential nomination, promised to announce further additions to Reagan's strength between now and the opening of the national convention in Kansas City Aug. 16. The latest UPI delegate count showed Ford with 1,122 delegates, Reagan with 1,031 and 106 uncommitted.

Senate defeats $1 billion defense cut

The Senate Monday defeated liberal moves to cut $1 billion from a $104 billion defense bill and delay spending another $274 million for 60 extra strategic missiles. The Senate voted down, 63 to 27, what opponents called a "meat axe" $1 billion cut in defense spending proposed by Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton.

Refugee camp to be evacuated today

An Arab mediator said Monday Christians agreed in writing to the evacuation of wounded from the Tal Zaatar refugee camp today. But the truce was threatened by the kidnap-slaying of a Christian politician. Arab League Envoy Hassan Sabry el Kholy said the agreement to permit Red Cross rescue of an estimated 4,000 wounded from Tal Zaatar, would be "the first step" in implementing an over-all truce called for in a pact signed by Syria and the Palestine Liberation Organization last week. The kidnap-murder of Khalil Salem, Christian director of Lebanon's defunct finance ministry, raised fears violent Christian reprisals could wreck peace prospects. Leftist militiamen reported finding Salem's bullet-riddled corpse wrapped in a blanket in the trunk of his car Monday, three days after he was abducted in a Moslem-controlled sector of Beirut. Salem was Greek Orthodox.

Fear fate of 2 Britons seized as spies

Uganda Monday denied all knowledge of two Britons reportedly arrested as spies, and diplomatic sources expressed fear the two may already be dead. Ugandan Pres. Idi Amin has not responded to an official inquiry from French Ambassador Pierre Renard for information about the missing Britons, diplomatic sources said. Renard is handling British affairs in Kampala after Britain's decision to break relations with Uganda. According to diplomatic sources, Briton Graham Clegg, 38, was arrested July 27 in eastern Uganda and a friend, Jack Tulley, 65, was picked up when he enquired about Clegg. Both were later transferred to Kampala on spying charges.

Cronin's raise too much: Howlett

Sec. of State Michael J. Howlett said Monday he thinks the $5,000 raise given to state School Supt. Joseph Cronin last month was too much. The raise, voted by the State Board of Education, brought Cronin's salary from $48,000 to $53,000. Howlett, the Democratic candidate for governor, said, "I don't think anyone (state employes) should get more money than an elected state official. He's certainly not worth that much more than the attorney general or the governor." Gov. Daniel Walker, the highest-paid, elected state official, receives a $50,000 annual salary.

McCarthy petitions submitted

Supporters of Eugene McCarthy, former Minnesota senator and 1968 anti-war Democratic candidate for president, Monday filed petitions to put him on the Nov. 2 ballot in Illinois as an independent presidential assistant. The name of a vice presidential candidate was not submitted. Officials at the Illinois Board of Elections said McCarthy's nominating papers appear to contain well over the 25,000 signatures required of minor-party hopefuls whose filing period ended Monday.

Missing remains not missing

McDonough County Sheriff John Bliven came back from vacation, and the mystery of the missing remains came to a quick solution. Deputies had reported that the Harris family mausoleum, west of Table Grove, had been broken into, which was true, and that the bodies of James Harris, put into a crypt in 1893, and his wife Ella, interred there in 1863, were missing from their coffins. Bliven reported, however, that the linings of the coffins had been loosened by age and had covered the remains. The bodies were there.

Six seek new trial in cement case

Motions for a new trial were filed Monday by five present and former state legislators and a lobbyist convicted in June of taking bribes from the cement industry. The motions were filed in federal court by attorneys for state Representative Robert Craig, D-Danville; state Rep. Louis Capuzi, D-Chicago; state Sen. Kenneth Course, D-Chicago; former state Rep. Frank P. North, R-Rockford; former state Sen. Jack Walker, R-Lansing, and lobbyist Peter V. Pappas. All were convicted by a federal court jury of taking bribes from the readi-mix cement industry in 1972 in return for passage of a bill increasing the amount of weight concrete trucks can carry. Most of the defendants asked for a new trial on grounds that U.S. District Court Judge George N. Leighton erred in allowing into evidence secret tape recordings made by government witnesses Pete Pappas (no relation to Peter V. Pappas) and Charles Carpentier.

'Rebuilding key to Marquette peace'

Mayor Richard J. Daley met Monday with 10 white residents of racially tense Marquette Park and said he stood "behind their desire to rebuild, to stabilize any neighborhood in our city." The Southwest Side neighborhood has been the scene of violence and confrontations since blacks began purchasing homes on the eastern fringe of the white working-class area last year. Daley and representatives of the Southwest Parish and Neighborhood Federation spoke briefly about a July 17 march by blacks into the with a hail of bricks, bottles and rocks. Henry Brozek, spokesman neighborhood in which hundreds of angry whites injured 28 persons for the whites, said Daley promised to have Lewis Hill, city commissioner of the department of development and planning, meet with the whites and representatives of black groups and financial instituations to plan economic solutions.

'L' crash preventable: agency

The National Transportation Safety Board said Monday last January's crash of two "L" trains which killed one person and injured nearly 400 others could have been prevented. The agency issued several recommendations it said could have prevented the crash at a stop on the Chicago Transit Authority's Jefferson Park commuter line. The board's report said trains with malfunctioning automatic train control or cab signals should be prevented from leaving the terminal. It urged that procedures be established immediately for discharging passengers and removing trains from service if ATC or cab signals develop problems en route.

Thompson lists contributors

Republican gubernatorial candidate James R. Thompson Monday said 8,632 supporters had donated a total of $1,065,084 to his campaign as of July 29. The financial statement listing campaign contributors during fiscal year 1975-76 was submitted by four Thompson campaign committees to the Illinois Board of Elections. It is required by law. The annual report also showed expenditures of $910,188.18.

The smiling tooth is testimonial to Dr. Burbach's traveling dental efforts that reached 8,000 patients.

On the road... to aid the need

Dentist laments tooth-care decay

by JUDIE BLACK

It had been only six months since Dr. George Burbach's last visit to Sheltering Oaks, an intermediate-care facility for 48 people in Island Lake, located in McHenry County. Still, the patient Dr. Burbach examined already had developed two new cavities.

"We ought to get you closer to a toothbrush," the traveling dentist told the patient who was sitting in the 27-foot van, a mobile office equipped with an X-ray machine, portable drills, sink, refrigerator, shower, air-conditioning and independent electrical generator.

The stop at Sheltering Oaks one recent afternoon was only one of many 36-year-old Burbach makes in the four days of every week he spends on the road, traveling obscure highways and back roads to reach persons in nursing homes, private institutions and migrant workers' camps — persons who otherwise probably never would have a needed dental visit.

"IT'S REALLY criminal what happens to peoples' mouths," Burbach said, driving his mobile office to Cary from Island Lake. "And it's doubly horrible that the state fosters this kind of thing."

Neither toothpaste nor toothbrush is listed among the supplies the state buys for persons in private institutions receiving public aid. Those supplies so necessary for good health are listed as "cosmetics."

"Can you imagine that?" the prematurely gray-haired Burbach asked incredulously. "I've seen mouths so obviously diseased and so sore it's difficult to know how these people go on living."

Burbach is even more amazed at institutional personnel who wash and shave their patients but fail to detect the horrors rampant in their patients' mouths.

"But they're not entirely to blame," Burbach admits. "There's a whole philosophy in our society of quietly accepting your mouth decaying. What other part of your body would you let rot?"

The mobile dental van, which cost $27,000 plus $23,000 to equip, and Burbach's 38,000 miles a year visiting "lots of places I never even heard of" are just two miniscule efforts in an ocean of seeming indifference, he says.

"Sometimes the enormity of the problem overwhelms me," he said. "The people I see (an estimated 8,000 a year) are just a small part of the people who need attention."

THE OUTLOOK is not totally bleak, however. Recently Burbach was in Washington as an invited consultant to the U.S. Dept. of Health, Education and Welfare in its efforts to revise medical checklists for all persons in institutions receiving federal funds. Burbach hopes the revised checklist will enable even the least experienced medical personnel to detect gross oral disease.

"I've seen people still wearing the dentures they were first fitted with 30 and 40 years ago," Burbach said, shaking his head. "The dentures have worn down the jaw bone and the people suffer from great canker sores draining pus and poison into their bodies. When their mouths feel so bad how can they help but feel miserable too?"

In addition to the elderly, Burbach treats physically and emotionally handicapped children. Some are so severely handicapped they can't fit comfortably in Burbach's collapsible black dental chair. In such cases, the dentist uses a bean bag, which easily fits a child's body, and Burbach works from the floor.

Burbach's efforts to bring dental care to those who can't reach it are expensive. Because many of his patients receive public aid, he is paid by the state. The paper work is enormous, and payment slow. He's gone bankrupt once.

"But money I can always make," the dentist said. "This kind of personal satisfaction you can't buy."

His visits, often the only contact with the outside world institutionalized persons have, are greeted with great excitement rather than dread.

Treating patients who are able and can afford to come to an office is "more like a business transaction than anything else," said Burbach, who also maintains a more typical dental office in Woodstock, where he works two days a week. "For me, it's more worthwhile to treat someone who probably would never see a dentist regularly if it weren't for me."

According to American Dental Assn. statistics quoted by Burbach, 70 per cent of the dental care in the United States is administered to only 10 per cent of the population. "Obviously something is not right here," Burbach said. He has been in private practice 11 years.

His idea of mobile dental care certainly is not new. He says similar units cared for American troops during World War II. The Illinois Dept. of Public Health has a fleet of three units similar to Burbach's, but only one is in operation, he said.

Burbach admits he is depressed by the constant stream of inflamed mouths, rotten teeth and diseased gums, and the lack of preventative care exercised in many public and private institutions.

"Just like a professional athlete, I have to psyche myself up for these trips. I do mental calisthenics just like they do before a big game," Burbach said. "You have to do that sort of thing in order to stay in the game."

Bill likely on chiefs' retirement aid

U.S. Rep. Philip Crane, R-12th, has agreed to cosponsor a bill that would ensure Social Security retirement credit through 1976 for Illinois police and fire chiefs.

Crane will sponsor the bill with U.S. Rep. Abner Mikva, D-10th, who heads the House Subcommittee on Social Security.

Earl Lewis, an aide to Crane, said Monday that hearings likely will be scheduled on the bill, although no dates have been set.

The bill stems from a Social Security Administration ruling in April that Illinois police and fire chiefs and public employes participating in the Illinois Municipal Retirement Fund program are ineligible for Social Security retirement pensions.

The agency's ruling is retroactive to 1969, which would mean a loss of seven years of pension credits for about 400 chiefs throughout the state. The ruling also calls for payments made into Social Security since 1969 to be refunded to the chiefs.

BENEFITS EARNED before 1969 are not affected.

The Mikva-Crane bill would eliminate the retroactive clause of the ruling so that chiefs would be given credit for benefits earned through this year before being excluded from Social Security benefits.

Rolling Meadows Police Chief Lewis R. Case has filed a civil rights class action lawsuit in U.S. District Court on behalf of the chiefs protesting the ruling.

The suit charges the U.S. Dept. of Health, Education and Welfare, the Social Security Administration and State Municipal Retirement Fund with violating the equal protection, due process and property rights of the chiefs.

U.S. District Judge John F. Grady has taken no action on the matter.

Pet piranhas? You bet, also eels, rats...

by JOE SWICKARD

There are piles of puppies, carloads of kittens, scads of snakes, gallons of guppies and oodles of eels.

If it crawls, slithers, swims, hops, runs, floats or flies, the odds are that some pet shop offers it for sale.

In a time when sharpies can make a bundle from selling pet rocks or invisible piranhas (actually empty aquariums), you'd better believe there is a market for the more traditional pets such as ferrets, rats, sungazer lizards, crabs, poisonous lion fish and armadillos, large and small.

Pals Pets, 17 N. Bothwell, Palatine, specializes in denizens of the deep. Customers entering the shop are greeted by a 4-foot blue ribbon eel peeking from a shell in a salt water aquarium.

THE EEL IS a tricky fellow, said Scott Krieble, a clerk at Pals Pets. Krieble said a couple of other eels already have escaped from the aquarium.

"They can crawl away through a very small opening," he said, indicating a tiny gap in the aquarium lid where air hoses enter the tank.

For those of you who can't live without one of the eels, it will cost about $28 to take him home.

Then there is the snake head fish — an ugly brute who looks just like his name. The snake head's tank is covered and weighted down with a good sized stone — and not without reason, Kreible said.

"He's a mean one. He eats other fish and he'll jump right out of the tank," he said. "This one's already gone through four owners and he's back here again." The charming native of India is available for $25.

A FISH WITH just a little better temperament is the lion fish with 13 poisonous dorsal spines. The sting of the fish causes reactions similar to those of bee stings in a hypersensitive person.

And who can forget the old standby of the Amazon? A pair of visible and voracious piranhas can be had for $25.

The Shasta Pet Center in the Brandenberry Plaza on Rand Road in Arlington Heights will sell you a desert swift for $20. The horny lizard chows down on meal worms and will stare affectionately at you with his beady little eyes.

For youngsters who have never known the thrill of hunting garter snakes with a mayonnaise jar, Shasta will sell one for $1.98.

Hermit crabs were offered at $1.98, but the shop has been sold out for about a month.

THE CRABS, land dwelling reptiles about the size of a half dollar, came into demand when the government cracked down on the sale of small turtles.

One enterprising pet shop owner in Ocean City, Md., treats his customers to a tape recording starring "Hermy the Crab," who beckons: "How'd you like to have a hermit in your house, one of America's favorite household pets?"

Hermy continues, "You can take them to school or put them in your purse and carry them to the opera."

Well, if an opera-going crab isn't your idea of an ideal companion, Pet World in the Randhurst Shopping Center has large and small armadillos instead.

With no mention of their tastes in music, large armadillos cost $17.95. The small fellows are a steal at $6.95.

NOAH'S ARK, 2430 E. Oakton St., Elk Grove Village, has a cage full of small, playful otter-like baby ferrets for only $44.95.

Sungazer lizards, parrots, a giant brilliant blue Hyacinth Macaw, and even crickets by the dozens are at Noah's Ark. And who could forget a cuddly mouse-fed ball python?

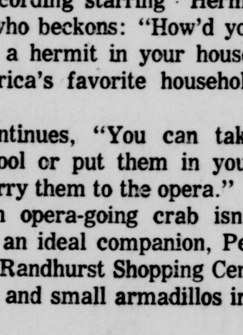

On second thought, those pet rocks and invisible piranhas aren't so odd after all.

Frank P. North, R-Rockford; former state Sen. Jack Walker, R-Lansing, and lobbyist Peter V. Pappas. All were convicted by a federal court jury of taking bribes from the readi-mix cement industry in 1972 in return for passage of a bill increasing the amount of weight concrete trucks can carry. Most of the defendants asked for a new trial on grounds that U.S. District Court Judge George N. Leighton erred in allowing into evidence secret tape recordings made by government witnesses Pete Pappas (no relation to Peter V. Pappas) and Charles Carpentier.

'Rebuilding key to Marquette peace'

Mayor Richard J. Daley met Monday with 10 white residents of racially tense Marquette Park and said he stood "behind their desire to rebuild, to stabilize any neighborhood in our city." The Southwest Side neighborhood has been the scene of violence and confrontations since blacks began purchasing homes on the eastern fringe of the white working-class area last year. Daley and representatives of the Southwest Parish and Neighborhood Federation spoke briefly about a July 17 march by blacks into the with a hail of bricks, bottles and rocks. Henry Brozek, spokesman neighborhood in which hundreds of angry whites injured 28 persons for the whites, said Daley promised to have Lewis Hill, city commissioner of the department of development and planning, meet with the whites and representatives of black groups and financial instituations to plan economic solutions.

'L' crash preventable: agency

The National Transportation Safety Board said Monday last January's crash of two "L" trains which killed one person and injured nearly 400 others could have been prevented. The agency issued several recommendations it said could have prevented the crash at a stop on the Chicago Transit Authority's Jefferson Park commuter line. The board's report said trains with malfunctioning automatic train control or cab signals should be prevented from leaving the terminal. It urged that procedures be established immediately for discharging passengers and removing trains from service if ATC or cab signals develop problems en route.

Thompson lists contributors

Republican gubernatorial candidate James R. Thompson Monday said 8,632 supporters had donated a total of $1,065,084 to his campaign as of July 29. The financial statement listing campaign contributors during fiscal year 1975-76 was submitted by four Thompson campaign committees to the Illinois Board of Elections. It is required by law. The annual report also showed expenditures of $910,188.18.

The smiling tooth is testimonial to Dr. Burbach's traveling dental efforts that reached 8,000 patients.

On the road...to aid the need

Dentist laments tooth-care decay

by JUDIE BLACK

It had been only six months since Dr. George Burbach's last visit to Sheltering Oaks, an intermediate-care facility for 48 people in Island Lake, located in McHenry County. Still, the patient Dr. Burbach examined already had developed two new cavities.

"We ought to get you closer to a toothbrush," the traveling dentist told the patient who was sitting in the 27-foot van, a mobile office equipped with an X-ray machine, portable drills, sink, refrigerator, shower, air-conditioning and independent electrical generator.

The stop at Sheltering Oaks one recent afternoon was only one of many 36-year-old Burbach makes in the four days of every week he spends on the road, traveling obscure highways and back roads to reach persons in nursing homes, private institutions and migrant workers' camps — persons who otherwise probably never would have a needed dental visit.

"IT'S REALLY criminal what happens to peoples' mouths," Burbach said, driving his mobile office to Cary from Island Lake. "And it's doubly horrible that the state fosters this kind of thing."

Neither toothpaste nor toothbrush is listed among the supplies the state buys for persons in private institutions receiving public aid. Those supplies so necessary for good health are listed as "cosmetics."

"Can you imagine that?" the prematurely gray-haired Burbach asked incredulously. "I've seen mouths so obviously diseased and so sore it's difficult to know how these people go on living."

Burbach is even more amazed at institutional personnel who wash and shave their patients but fail to detect the horrors rampant in their patients' mouths.

"But they're not entirely to blame," Burbach admits. "There's a whole philosophy in our society of quietly accepting your mouth decaying. What other part of your body would you let rot?"

The mobile dental van, which cost $27,000 plus $23,000 to equip, and Burbach's 38,000 miles a year visiting "lots of places I never even heard of" are just two miniscule efforts in an ocean of seeming indifference, he says.

"Sometimes the enormity of the problem overwhelms me," he said. "The people I see (an estimated 8,000 a year) are just a small part of the people who need attention."

THE OUTLOOK is not totally bleak, however. Recently Burbach was in Washington as an invited consultant to the U.S. Dept. of Health, Education and Welfare in its efforts to revise medical checklists for all persons in institutions receiving federal funds. Burbach hopes the revised checklist will enable even the least experienced medical personnel to detect gross oral disease.

"I've seen people still wearing the dentures they were first fitted with 30 and 40 years ago," Burbach said, shaking his head. "The dentures have worn down the jaw bone and the people suffer from great canker sores draining pus and poison into their bodies. When their mouths feel so bad how can they help but feel miserable too?"

In addition to the elderly, Burbach treats physically and emotionally handicapped children. Some are so severely handicapped they can't fit comfortably in Burbach's collapsible black dental chair. In such cases, the dentist uses a bean bag, which easily fits a child's body, and Burbach works from the floor.

Burbach's efforts to bring dental care to those who can't reach it are expensive. Because many of his patients receive public aid, he is paid by the state. The paper work is enormous, and payment slow. He's gone bankrupt once.

"But money I can always make," the dentist said. "This kind of personal satisfaction you can't buy."

His visits, often the only contact with the outside world institutionalized persons have, are greeted with great excitement rather than dread.

Treating patients who are able and can afford to come to an office is "more like a business transaction than anything else," said Burbach, who also maintains a more typical dental office in Woodstock, where he works two days a week. "For me, it's more worthwhile to treat someone who probably would never see a dentist regularly if it weren't for me."

According to American Dental Assn. statistics quoted by Burbach, 70 per cent of the dental care in the United States is administered to only 10 per cent of the population. "Obviously something is not right here," Burbach said. He has been in private practice 11 years.

His idea of mobile dental care certainly is not new. He says similar units cared for American troops during World War II. The Illinois Dept. of Public Health has a fleet of three units similar to Burbach's, but only one is in operation, he said.

Burbach admits he is depressed by the constant stream of inflamed mouths, rotten teeth and diseased gums, and the lack of preventative care exercised in many public and private institutions.

"Just like a professional athlete, I have to psyche myself up for these trips. I do mental calisthenics just like they do before a big game," Burbach said. "You have to do that sort of thing in order to stay in the game."

Bill likely on chiefs' retirement aid

U.S. Rep. Philip Crane, R-12th, has agreed to cosponsor a bill that would ensure Social Security retirement credit through 1976 for Illinois police and fire chiefs.

Crane will sponsor the bill with U.S. Rep. Abner Mikva, D-10th, who heads the House Subcommittee on Social Security.

Earl Lewis, an aide to Crane, said Monday that hearings likely will be scheduled on the bill, although no dates have been set.

The bill stems from a Social Security Administration ruling in April that Illinois police and fire chiefs and public employes participating in the Illinois Municipal Retirement Fund program are ineligible for Social Security retirement pensions.

The agency's ruling is retroactive to 1969, which would mean a loss of seven years of pension credits for about 400 chiefs throughout the state. The ruling also calls for payments made into Social Security since 1969 to be refunded to the chiefs.

BENEFITS EARNED before 1969 are not affected.

The Mikva-Crane bill would eliminate the retroactive clause of the ruling so that chiefs would be given credit for benefits earned through this year before being excluded from Social Security benefits.

Rolling Meadows Police Chief Lewis R. Case has filed a civil rights class action lawsuit in U.S. District Court on behalf of the chiefs protesting the ruling.

The suit charges the U.S. Dept. of Health, Education and Welfare, the Social Security Administration and State Municipal Retirement Fund with violating the equal protection, due process and property rights of the chiefs.

U.S. District Judge John F. Grady has taken no action on the matter.

Pet piranhas? You bet, also eels, rats...

by JOE SWICKARD

There are piles of puppies, carloads of kittens, scads of snakes, gallons of guppies and oodles of eels.

If it crawls, slithers, swims, hops, runs, floats or flies, the odds are that some pet shop offers it for sale.

In a time when sharpies can make a bundle from selling pet rocks or invisible piranhas (actually empty aquariums), you'd better believe there is a market for the more traditional pets such as ferrets, rats, sungazer lizards, crabs, poisonous lion fish and armadillos, large and small.

Pals Pets, 17 N. Bothwell, Palatine, specializes in denizens of the deep. Customers entering the shop are greeted by a 4-foot blue ribbon eel peeking from a shell in a salt water aquarium.

THE EEL IS a tricky fellow, said Scott Krieble, a clerk at Pals Pets. Krieble said a couple of other eels already have escaped from the aquarium.

"They can crawl away through a very small opening," he said, indicating a tiny gap in the aquarium lid where air hoses enter the tank.

For those of you who can't live without one of the eels, it will cost about $28 to take him home.

Then there is the snake head fish — an ugly brute who looks just like his name. The snake head's tank is covered and weighted down with a good sized stone — and not without reason, Kreible said.

"He's a mean one. He eats other fish and he'll jump right out of the tank," he said. "This one's already gone through four owners and he's back here again." The charming native of India is available for $25.

A FISH WITH just a little better temperament is the lion fish with 13 poisonous dorsal spines. The sting of the fish causes reactions similar to those of bee stings in a hypersensitive person.

And who can forget the old standby of the Amazon? A pair of visible and voracious piranhas can be had for $25.

The Shasta Pet Center in the Brandenberry Plaza on Rand Road in Arlington Heights will sell you a desert swift for $20. The horny lizard chows down on meal worms and will stare affectionately at you with his beady little eyes.

For youngsters who have never known the thrill of hunting garter snakes with a mayonnaise jar, Shasta will sell one for $1.98.

Hermit crabs were offered at $1.98, but the shop has been sold out for about a month.

THE CRABS, land dwelling reptiles about the size of a half dollar, came into demand when the government cracked down on the sale of small turtles.

One enterprising pet shop owner in Ocean City, Md., treats his customers to a tape recording starring "Hermy the Crab," who beckons: "How'd you like to have a hermit in your house, one of America's favorite household pets?"

Hermy continues, "You can take them to school or put them in your purse and carry them to the opera."

Well, if an opera-going crab isn't your idea of an ideal companion, Pet World in the Randhurst Shopping Center has large and small armadillos instead.

With no mention of their tastes in music, large armadillos cost $17.95. The small fellows are a steal at $6.95.

NOAH'S ARK, 2430 E. Oakton St., Elk Grove Village, has a cage full of small, playful otter-like baby ferrets for only $44.95.

Sungazer lizards, parrots, a giant brilliant blue Hyacinth Macaw, and even crickets by the dozens are at Noah's Ark. And who could forget a cuddly mouse-fed ball python?

On second thought, those pet rocks and invisible piranhas aren't so odd after all.

In Springfield

Lincoln's capitol days in sound and light show

The Old State Capitol in Springfield is the scene this summer of modern electronic production recreating the life of Abraham Lincoln during his 24 years as a public figure in Illinois.

The production, "Sound and Light at the Old State Capitol" premiered July 4 as the official Bicentennial gift of the citizens of Illinois to the citizens of the nation.

The 45-minute production is shown each evening at 9 p.m. in a 400-seat viewing area in the south plaza of the Old Capitol, weather permitting. "Sound and Light" will be shown each summer for years to come. This year's season closes Sept. 11. There is no admission charge.

THE STORY recounts the days spent by Lincoln at the capitol where he served as a state representative, practiced law, was nominated for U.S. Senator and delivered the speech that led to the famous debates with Stephen A. Douglas.

The story is narrated by the late Lee J. Cobb, his last professional performance before his death last February. Paul Lambert is the voice of Abraham Lincoln and Whit Bissell reads the words of Douglas.

The audience sits in darkness and silence during the performance. No films or photographs are used. The story is told only through recorded voices, music and sound effects and the dramatic use of shadow and light constantly changing color, focus and intensity.

The sound and light medium works on the principle used in the golden days of radio to spur the human imagination.

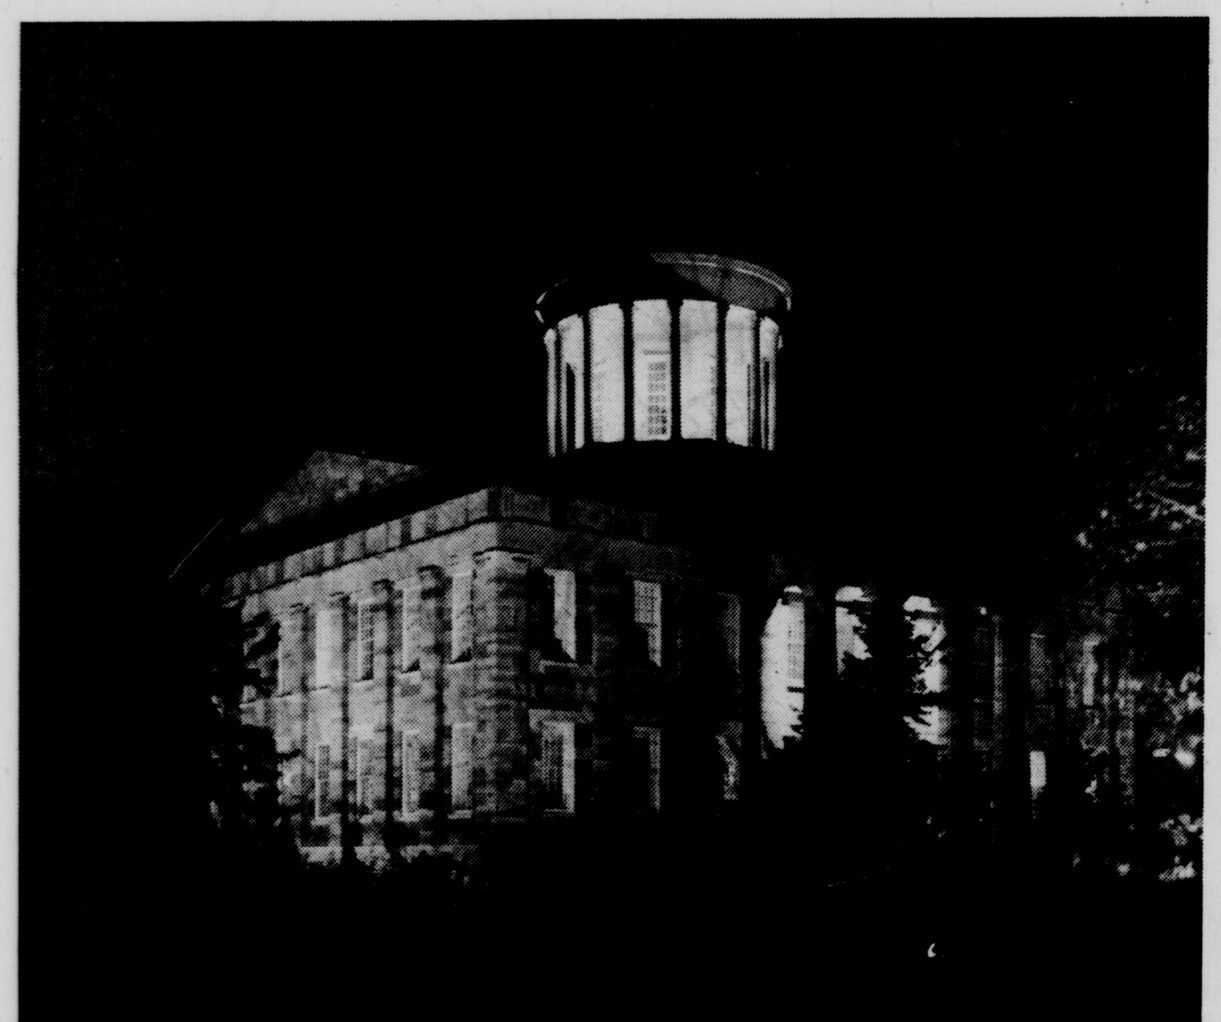

THE USE OF artificial sound and lighting suggests to the spectator a new world of which he himself seems a part. Hearing a voice gives the impression that someone is present and the lighting of a window gives the impression that someone is entering a room.

Voices, sound effects and music are recorded on 8-track tape with six audio channels and 11 speakers strategically located so the sound source seems to move. The lighting system consists of more than 160 lighting fixtures, 35 dimmers and 100 switches. A computer is used to activate the system.

The sound and light spectacle was first developed in France during the 1950s and spread throughout Europe. Sound and light programs may be viewed in this country at Independence Hall in Philadelphia, George Washington's home in Mount Vernon and at Ford's Theater in Washington, D.C.

The Springfield production was financed through $600,000 appropriated by the Illinois General Assembly and $50,000 in private contributions raised by the Abraham Lincoln Assn.

Following each performance one of the five existing copies of the Gettysburg Address in Lincoln's own handwriting is available for public viewing in the lobby of the capitol. The Old State Capitol building itself is open to the public daily from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

August packed with events

Canada plans profusion of festival activities

Summer is festival time in the Alberta and Saskatchewan provinces of Canada. Events scheduled this year include fairs, exhibitions, festivals and cultural programs.

Music, drama, ballet and opera are featured today through Aug. 21 against the backdrop of Canada's Rocky Mountains in the Banff Festival of the Arts, Banff, Alberta.

This year's program includes "An Evening of Contemporary American Music" hosted by American composer and conductor Aaron Copland on Aug. 19 and the Canadian Chamber Orchestra, conducted by Copland and Henri Temiankn, in an all-Copland program Aug. 8. One of the five ballets to be presented during the festival is "Rodeo" with score by Copland.

FOR OPERA lovers the festival includes Gioacchino Rossini's "La Cenerentola," an opulent version of the fairy tale Cinderella to be presented Aug. 20 and 21.

For lighter musical entertainment, Cole Porter's musical "Kiss Me Kate" will be presented in four performances Aug. 12-15.

For drama there will be Percy MacKaye's romanticized version of the Frankenstein legend, "The Scarecrow" set in Massachusetts at the time of the Salem witch trials.

Names also featured in the festival's major evening performances include Janos Starker, The Canadian Brass, Phil Nimmons, Paul Horn and Clark Terry, as well as the Canadian Chamber Orchestra.

Most performances are held in the 1,000 seat Eric Harvie Theater or the 250-seat Margaret Greeham Theater. A number of free performances by students and faculty of the Banff School of Fine Arts Music Division will be held at the Banff Centre and throughout the town of Banff.

RESERVED TICKETS for performances in the Eric Harvie Theater are $4 to $6. General admission to the Margaret Greeham Theater is $4 with senior citizens and children admitted for half price.

Most Saskatchewan exhibitions have been around for a long time, and are awaited each year with anticipation.

Regina's Buffalo Days, through Saturday, brings back the time when this noble animal roamed the Canadian west, when the men were rough and ready, and the ladies were glad they were.

Buffalo Days events include livestock judging, the heavy horse show, cooking demonstrations and needle work, crocheting, knitting, and baking competitions.

Young people take an active part in events such as the Saskatchewan Education Exhibit, which offers hundreds of categories for displays dealing with industrial arts, social studies, home economics and hobbies.

For little tykes, there's the Barnyard Zoo; for those wishing to try their luck, the Buffalo Buck Casino; and for those with a thirst, the Buffalo Beer Garden.

TO ENTERTAIN visitors, Buffalo Days brings in big name talent for the grandstand show. During the day there's free entertainment such as fashion shows, parades and the horseshoe tournament.

Buffalo Days brings out the buttons and bows of yesteryear for the ladies, while men start early to cultivate the mustaches and beards they enter in the Beard Growing Contest.

You can get carted away to the Buffalo Jail if you're caught walking the streets of Regina not wearing a Buffalo Days button or a costume from days gone by.

Canadian fairs and exhibitions are not confined to the province of Saskatchewan. They can be found all across the country and run the gamut from very small to very big.

In Vancouver, British Columbia, the Pacific National Exhibition which was begun in 1910, last year drew 1.3 million visitors. Among its many attractions are the midway, big name entertainment, agricultural competitions, and the Timber Show.

THE TIMBER SHOW brings together top loggers who compete for the Open World Championship. Events include log birling (rolling), axe throwing, and team relays.

In 1976, the exhibition will be held through Sept. 6.

In Atlantic Canada, the fairs tend to be smaller but they are awaited with every bit as much excitement.

In Charlottetown, P.E.I., Old Home Week, Aug. 9-14, draws former Islanders from across Canada and the United States.

Among other major Canadian fairs and exhibitions to watch for this summer are: The Nova Scotia Provincial Exhibition at Truro, Aug. 23-29; and Central Canada Exhibition, Ottawa, Aug. 20-29.

Hot air balloon meet Friday in Iowa

Balloonists will find plenty of hot air in Indianola, Iowa, Friday through Aug. 14 during the National Hot Air Balloon Championships.

Top balloonists from across America will compete in such events as the convergent navigational task, predetermined spot landing, elbow task and hare and hound rally. Activities include a mass ascension of more than 200 balloons, a balloon parade and picnic.

Lufthansa offers in-flight exercises

Passengers are getting a work-out on Lufthansa German Airlines' 747s and DC-10s.

By tuning in to one of the music channels passengers can hear a recorded physical exercise program designed to help get the kinks out without disturbing other passengers.

The program, based on the fitness program used by American astronauts on space flights, carries instruction for exercising all the muscles from the feet to the shoulders, stretching limbs and joints and loosening the spine. The exercises stimulate heart action and blood circulation and are performed to background music.

Most Saskatchewan exhibitions have been around for a long time, and are awaited each year with anticipation.

Regina's Buffalo Days, through Saturday, brings back the time when this noble animal roamed the Canadian west, when the men were rough and ready, and the ladies were glad they were.

Buffalo Days events include livestock judging, the heavy horse show, cooking demonstrations and needle work, crocheting, knitting, and baking competitions.

Young people take an active part in events such as the Saskatchewan Education Exhibit, which offers hundreds of categories for displays dealing with industrial arts, social studies, home economics and hobbies.

For little tykes, there's the Barnyard Zoo; for those wishing to try their luck, the Buffalo Buck Casino; and for those with a thirst, the Buffalo Beer Garden.

TO ENTERTAIN visitors, Buffalo Days brings in big name talent for the grandstand show. During the day there's free entertainment such as fashion shows, parades and the horseshoe tournament.

Buffalo Days brings out the buttons and bows of yesteryear for the ladies, while men start early to cultivate the mustaches and beards they enter in the Beard Growing Contest.

You can get carted away to the Buffalo Jail if you're caught walking the streets of Regina not wearing a Buffalo Days button or a costume from days gone by.

Canadian fairs and exhibitions are not confined to the province of Saskatchewan. They can be found all across the country and run the gamut from very small to very big.

In Vancouver, British Columbia, the Pacific National Exhibition which was begun in 1910, last year drew 1.3 million visitors. Among its many attractions are the midway, big name entertainment, agricultural competitions, and the Timber Show.

THE TIMBER SHOW brings together top loggers who compete for the Open World Championship. Events include log birling (rolling), axe throwing, and team relays.

In 1976, the exhibition will be held through Sept. 6.

In Atlantic Canada, the fairs tend to be smaller but they are awaited with every bit as much excitement.

In Charlottetown, P.E.I., Old Home Week, Aug. 9-14, draws former Islanders from across Canada and the United States.

Among other major Canadian fairs and exhibitions to watch for this summer are: The Nova Scotia Provincial Exhibition at Truro, Aug. 23-29; and Central Canada Exhibition, Ottawa, Aug. 20-29.

Lufthansa offers in-flight exercises

Passengers are getting a work-out on Lufthansa German Airlines' 747s and DC-10s.

By tuning in to one of the music channels passengers can hear a recorded physical exercise program designed to help get the kinks out without disturbing other passengers.

The program, based on the fitness program used by American astronauts on space flights, carries instruction for exercising all the muscles from the feet to the shoulders, stretching limbs and joints and loosening the spine. The exercises stimulate heart action and blood circulation and are performed to background music.

Planning needed for 911 number

The City of Chicago's September implementation of a 911 emergency telephone service capable of handling between 13,000 and 14,000 calls daily to police and fire departments should serve as ample proof that the heavily discussed, government supported system can be made workable on a large scale.

It further should provide the impetus for more concise and concentrated planning to determine how the 911 emergency number service can be implemented throughout the Northwest suburbs.

The 911 concept has received enthusiastic backing from the White House to the Illinois legislature, which last year passed into law a bill that will make the 911 system mandatory throughout this state within the next 10 years.

Hoffman Estates, Schaumburg, Palatine and Elk Grove Village all have undertaken studies to determine the feasibility of 911 for their communities.

Chicago, with its more than three million residents, has made the 911 concept possible by aligning its police and fire districts with telephone company boundaries.

The system goes into operation Sept. 16, but it will be revised and computer-operated next March. In that phase, a 911 call placed in Chicago will be computer identifiable to the exact house from where the telephone call was made.

The emergency system cannot be so easily implemented throughout the suburbs because police and fire department boundaries often have no similarity with township and telephone company lines.

It is now time for the communities which comprise these Northwest suburban townships to unite in a joint effort that will someday make 911 a reality for the hundreds of thousands of local citizens.

Each day that passes without this joint effort is one day lost. Each dollar spent on smaller scale studies is one dollar that might have been more productively used in a joint effort.

And each year that is lost brings us one year closer to the day that 911 will be mandatory in Illinois. Without correct planning and cooperation, the implementation of 911 will be difficult at best. We think that confusion can be avoided.

House reprimand of Sikes needed precedent

It has taken a number of years, but the U.S. House, usually stubborn and lethargic in such matters, finally decided to bring disciplinary charges against a congressman.

House members frequently have chosen to look the other way, but when they were confronted by Common Cause, the citizen's lobbying group, with the transgressions of U.S. Rep. Robert F. L. Sikes, D-Fla., the House decided to act.

Sikes managed to involve himself in a number of conflict of interest situations over the years. It appears that his general disdain for separating the business of government from private ventures finally has caught up with him.

The House voted last week to administer a reprimand, the weakest form of penalty that can be levied. But there are signs that reform-minded congressmen will work to strip Sikes of the chairmanship of the powerful House Appropriations Committee if he is reelected in the fall.

The 434 members of the House demonstrated they were willing to reprimand colleagues. Even though the penalty was practically non-existent, the action set a significant precedent.

If government leaders ever hope to regain the respect of the people, more attention must be paid to cleaning up the ethical abuses that appear all too frequently.

The action against Sikes was a good start but whether this will set a trend for others to follow remains to be seen.

Harper board should be more mindful of the taxpayer

President Lahti of Harper College writes, "I stand ready to defend that my decisions have consistently represented the public interest . . . I continue to welcome individual or collective constructive criticism aimed at building the future of Harper for even greater public service to its community."

That's great! We welcome new and better services. Here are some examples of Harper service: Wouldn't it be nice to spread it around?

• Dr. Lahti and his family went on vacation. They didn't want to leave their car at O'Hare. Solution: direct Harper employe to drive them to O'Hare.

• Dr. Lahti's son was in a soccer game. His wife was in the hospital and Dr. Lahti was busy with Harper. How does his son get home? Solution: direct Harper employe to pick son up and drive him home.

• Dr. Lahti has the car keys at Harper. The car is home. His wife needs to run errands and drive kids to school. Solution: direct Harper employe to drive the keys to Lahti's home.

• Dr. Lahti is on the board of directors of the Elk Grove Bank. His Harper car is being repaired. Solution: get a Harper employe to drive him to a meeting of the bank's board of directors.

THESE EXAMPLES of public service for personal problems might come in handy for many of us who need wheels or who are hung up on meeting day-to-day responsibilities at home or at work. Gosh, it cost me $37.50 to rent a car while my car was being fixed.

Harper board members are catching on to the luxury of public service, as shown by Dr. Lahti. Executives of my company — including the corporation president — travel coach on business flights. It's interesting that apparently on some flights, at least, Harper board members may be in first class, attending to "public service," while their constituents, traveling on corporate business, may be traveling coach.

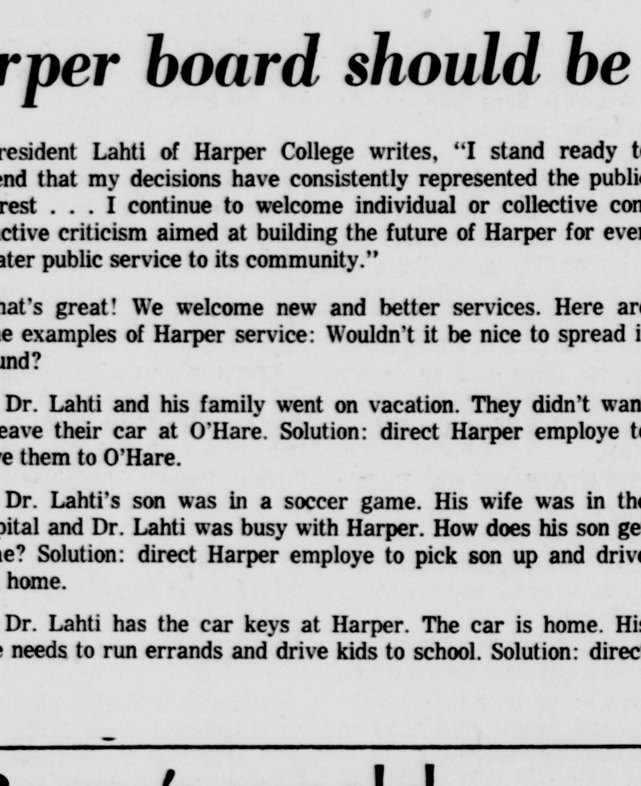

The amounts involved may be small in comparison to the $14 million budget of the college. But they are still taxpayer funds. I do not consider the above examples appropriate and prudent use of taxpayer money.

What's happened is in the past. But in future, I hope the board is scrupulously careful with expenditures. If board policy is fuzzy on first-class air travel for board members, then let's discuss it and make it firm. And I hope the board is mindful enough of taxpayer funds to take a future firm stand against the use of Harper personnel and vehicles for private errands.

The rest of us have to solve our own problems. I think Dr. Lahti — at $44,000 a year — can figure out some alternative ways to solve his.

Worthy of note

My prayers were answered, thanks to the kind people who happened to be at the Arlington Heights train station and noticed my husband's dog, Suzzette, sitting there. They picked up the dog, a black Poodle, and called the police.

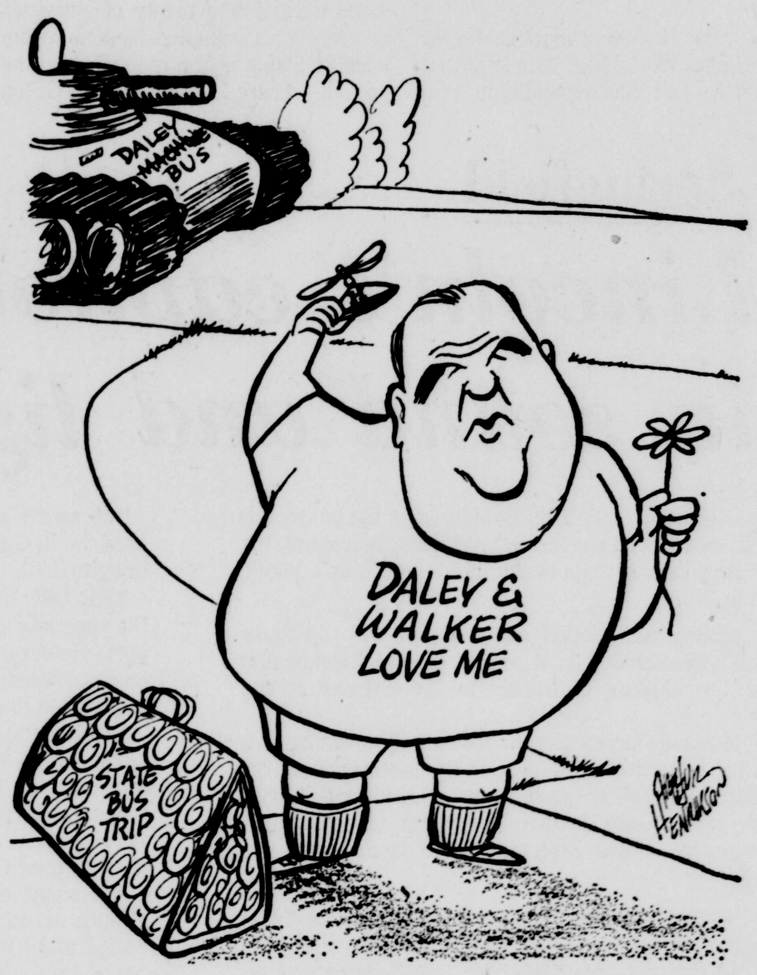

Suzzette was to be groomed that day so the driver picked her up at 9:25 a.m. He came back to our house at 9:35 to inform us that she had jumped from his truck and he looked for her but couldn't find her. My daughter and I, joined by others, looked for three hours to no avail.

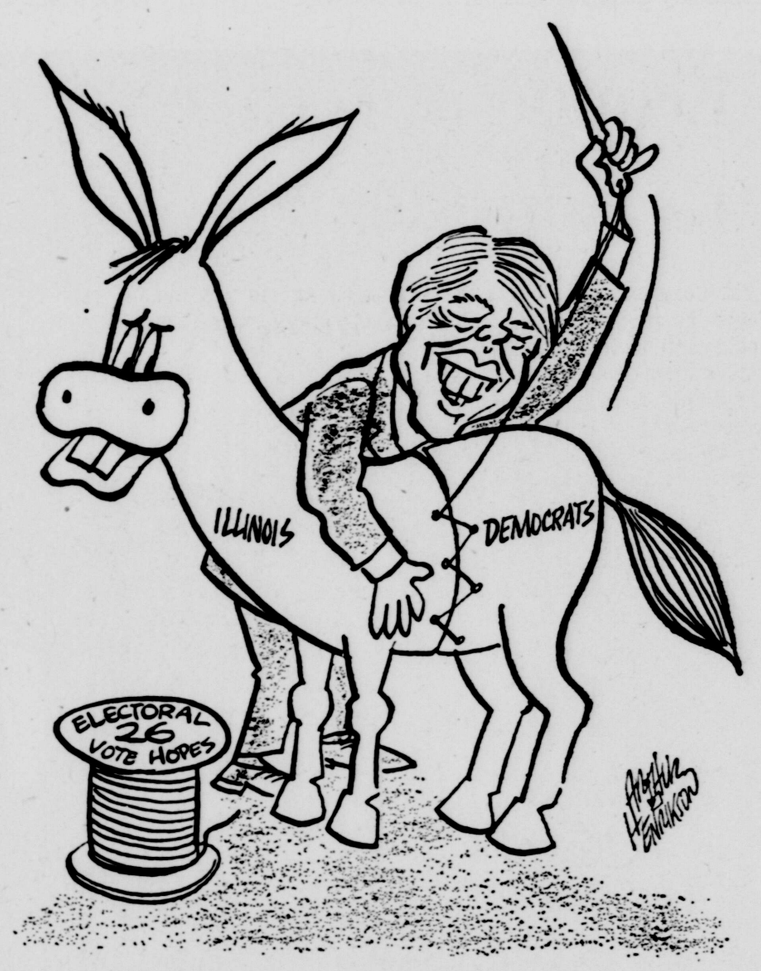

Suzzette is special because she is my husband's constant companion. Even though my husband cannot speak, as the result of several strokes over a period of 14 years, the two are able to communicate. Having to inform him that the dog was lost and especially that day, which was his 74th birthday, I prayed for a miracle, and that's what it was.

It turned out to be a happy birthday, thanks to the people who noticed the dog, to the Arlington Heights Police Dept., and to Officer Jackie, the animal warden who brought Suzzette home.

S&Ls offer draft-writing services

by LEA TONKIN

Savings and loan associations are moving a step closer to one-stop financial service — and commercial bankers' turf — by offering consumers negotiable order of withdrawal (NOW) accounts similar to checking accounts.

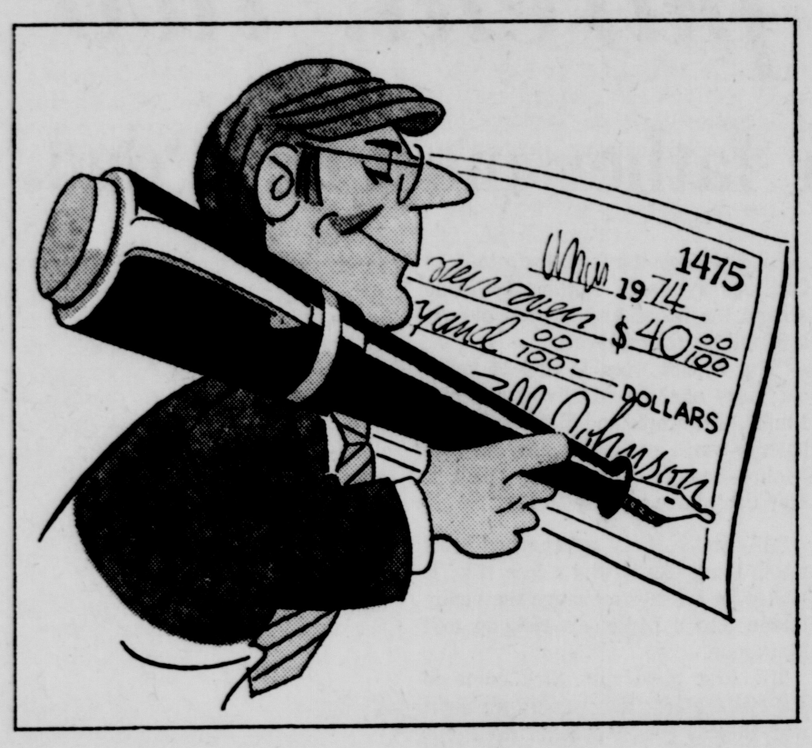

The NOW accounts are available at state-chartered S&Ls in Illinois. Outside the state, the only places they're found are New England states and New York.

Three Northwest suburban S&Ls that decided to jump into this new market see the NOW account as a sign of changing times. "It's a major step towards offering complete financial services," said Ira Nathanson, vice president and director of marketing for Unity Savings, Schaumburg.

NATHANSON FIGURES an average customer can save $50 a year by using the NOW account, depending on its size. "In essence, what a NOW account does if it's used properly is to save interest," he said.

Here's how a NOW account works: a minimum balance generally required by an S&L is deposited in the account. When a customer is short of cash, a draft is written on the account. It's like a bank checking account, but S&Ls cannot use the checking account label. The draft is processed through the Federal Reserve system in the same manner a bank processes checks.

Interest is earned on passbook account funds at the institution until the money is transferred for payment on a NOW account draft. The NOW account compares to the cooperative bank checking accounts offered to some S&L customers.

Nathanson said legislation pending in Congress could enable federally chartered S&Ls to offer NOW accounts. Eventually commercial banks may offer similar accounts, and the interest-bearing checking account may become commonplace, he said.

"THERE HAVE been bills in Washington to allow NOW accounts on a federal level," said James Kemp Jr., general counsel for the Illinois savings and loan commissioner's office. "We thought it was a good idea to institute them on a state level." State-chartered S&Ls cannot offer interest on NOW accounts, but they automatically will gain the authority if federally chartered S&Ls get the green light.

"If interest on the accounts is allowed, it would simplify the whole procedure," said George Doerr, branch manager for the Melrose Savings office in Palatine.

Doerr said the NOW account is increasingly popular with customers. "It's another service we can offer our customers without going to two different financial institutions," he said.

By maintaining a $200 minimum balance in a passbook account, customers can gain interest on the account and write drafts on a NOW account with no service charge.

"THIS WILL attract people who would normally go to a bank," said Fran Tomasello, a savings counselor at Chicago Savings in Des Plaines. "Otherwise they would have several hundred dollars lying around in a checking account earning no interest." A $250 minimum balance is required in an account, for a customer to receive free NOW account drafts. Accounts below that amount are billed $2 a month.

The NOW account is one more step toward the family financial center concept, said Ron Keener of the Illinois Savings and Loan League. The service augments consumer lending, auto loans and other services aggressive S&Ls offer to their customers, Keener said.

The family financial center concept is the only thing that will keep the industry alive in the long run, predicts Gerald Rogers, Naperville Savings and Loan Assn. president. Rogers said the ¼ per cent advantage that S&Ls can claim over banks for savings interest payments "is going to fade away and we better be ready for it."

Dow loses 2.3 points, trading slow

NEW YORK (UPI) — The stock market, faced with a slowed-down economy and declining interest rates, drifted lower Monday in slow trading on the New York Stock Exchange because of a lack of bidding.

Investors displayed little emotion over Commerce Dept. reports that construction spending rose 1.6 per cent in June and that inventories increased 1.2 per cent, the largest surge in 18 months. Factory orders remained unchanged.

Some buying early in the day followed news most of the nation's major banks, continuing a trend begun last week, were lowering their prime lending rate for business loans a quarter point to 7 per cent. The early surge, however, dried up drapidly.

AS A RESULT, the Dow Jones industrial average, up about a point at the outset, lost 2.38 points to 982.26. It gained 5.35 points Friday, snapping a three-day losing streak.

The NYSE common stock index lost 0.13 to 55.13 and the average price of an NYSE common share decreased by eight cents.

Breadth figures revealed the uncertainty existing among investors. Of the 1,815 issues crossing the tape, 697 declined, 630 advanced and 488 remained unchanged.

Volume totaled 13,870,000 shares, down from the 14,830,000 traded Friday. Last week's trading was the slowest of the year.

Standard & Poor's new 500-stock index, which includes some over-the-counter stocks, lost 0.25 to 103.19.

Prices closed lower in moderate trading on the American Stock Exchange. The average price of an Amex share decreased by four cents. Volume totaled 1,800,000 shares, compared with 1,518,000 traded Friday.

Economic recovery to continue: report

The Congressional Budget Office Monday agreed with the White House in predicting the nation's moderate economic recovery would continue through 1977.

"The recovery appears to be solid if not especially rapid," said budget office director Alice Rivlin. Among the report's specific projections:

- An unemployment rate of 6.9 to 7.3 per cent by the end of the year, and from 5.8 to 6.4 per cent by the end of 1977;
- A rise in the inflation rate of 5 to 7 per cent for the next year and a half, roughly the same as the 5.5 per cent rate during the first year of recovery;
- The gross National Product, adjusted for the effects of inflation, will rise 5 to 6.5 per cent during the remainder of the year and 4.5 to 6.5 per cent during 1977.

Coal strike losing support

A wildcat coal mine strike which idled as many as 80,000 miners last week showed signs of losing support Monday as miners in Ohio, Kentucky and Virginia began returning to work. But from southern West Virginia, where the walkout began in mid-July, picketing by dissidents spread across the state, shutting down coal production. Miners in the north had voted to go back to work, but pickets closed their mines, prompting a call for strong action by United Mine Workers District 31 Pres. June Floyd of Fairmont.

UAW president attends talks

United Auto Workers Pres. Leonard Woodcock attended the opening round of contract negotiations with Deere and Co. Monday to "signify the importance of these negotiations to the whole union." Woodcock and UAW international vice president Pat Greathouse led a 24-member union bargaining team at Moline which will attempt to work out a new three-year master contract for 27,000 Deere employes.

Galaxy shows profit gain

Galaxy Carpet Mills, Inc., Elk Grove Village, reported a 69 per cent gain in profits for the 39 weeks ended June 26. Irwin Harvey, president, said net income reached $674,000 or 36 cents a share compared to $399,000 or 21 cents a share the previous period. Net sales for the period amounted to $47,073,000. For the third quarter of the year ended June 26, the carpet producers earned $439,000 or 24 cents a share on sales of $17,064,000.

Supply firms earnings up

American Hospital Supply Corp. reported record sales, earnings and earnings per share for the first half and second quarter of the year. Karl D. Bays, chairman and chief executive officer, said net sales for the first half of the year reached $642,767,000 compared to year-earlier $543,426,000.

Net earnings totaled $31,994,000 compared to $24,140,000 one year ago. Earnings per share amounted to 85 cents, compared to 65 cents for the first six months of 1975. For the three months ending June 30, net sales were $332,688,000 and net earnings totaled $15,407,000 or 41 cents a share. The firm has a facility in Mount Prospect.

S&Ls offer draft-writing services

by LEA TONKIN

Savings and loan associations are moving a step closer to one-stop financial service — and commercial bankers' turf — by offering consumers negotiable order of withdrawal (NOW) accounts similar to checking accounts.

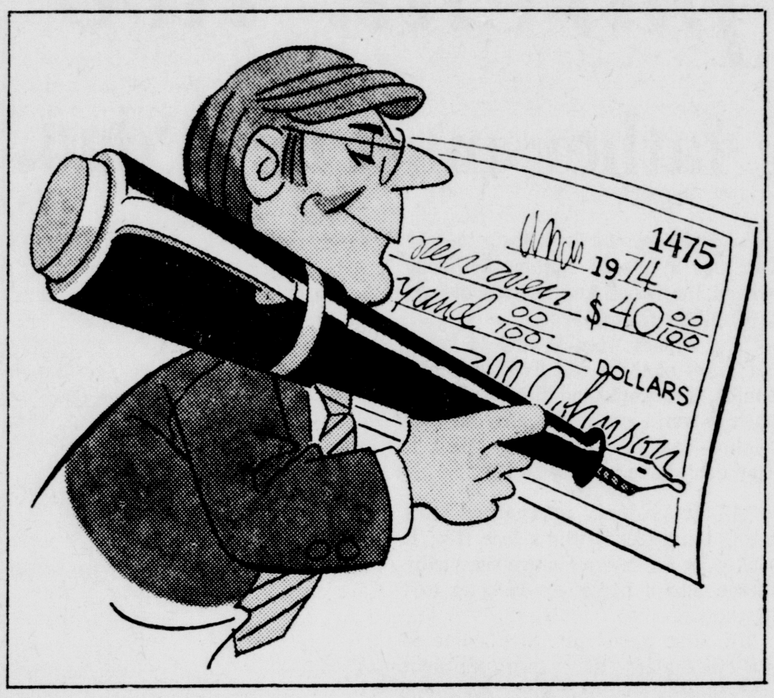

The NOW accounts are available at state-chartered S&Ls in Illinois. Outside the state, the only places they're found are New England states and New York.

Three Northwest suburban S&Ls that decided to jump into this new market see the NOW account as a sign of changing times. "It's a major step towards offering complete financial services," said Ira Nathanson, vice president and director of marketing for Unity Savings, Schaumburg.

NATHANSON FIGURES an average customer can save $50 a year by using the NOW account, depending on its size. "In essence, what a NOW account does if it's used properly is to save interest," he said.

Here's how a NOW account works: a minimum balance generally required by an S&L is deposited in the account. When a customer is short of cash, a draft is written on the account. It's like a bank checking account, but S&Ls cannot use the checking account label. The draft is processed through the Federal Reserve system in the same manner a bank processes checks.

Interest is earned on passbook account funds at the institution until the money is transferred for payment on a NOW account draft. The NOW account compares to the cooperative bank checking accounts offered to some S&L customers.

Nathanson said legislation pending in Congress could enable federally chartered S&Ls to offer NOW accounts. Eventually commercial banks may offer similar accounts, and the interest-bearing checking account may become commonplace, he said.

"THERE HAVE been bills in Washington to allow NOW accounts on a federal level," said James Kemp Jr., general counsel for the Illinois savings and loan commissioner's office. "We thought it was a good idea to institute them on a state level." State-chartered S&Ls cannot offer interest on NOW accounts, but they automatically will gain the authority if federally chartered S&Ls get the green light.

"If interest on the accounts is allowed, it would simplify the whole procedure," said George Doerr, branch manager for the Melrose Savings office in Palatine.

Doerr said the NOW account is increasingly popular with customers. "It's another service we can offer our customers without going to two different financial institutions," he said.

By maintaining a $200 minimum balance in a passbook account, customers can gain interest on the account and write drafts on a NOW account with no service charge.

"THIS WILL attract people who would normally go to a bank," said Fran Tomasello, a savings counselor at Chicago Savings in Des Plaines. "Otherwise they would have several hundred dollars lying around in a checking account earning no interest." A $250 minimum balance is required in an account, for a customer to receive free NOW account drafts. Accounts below that amount are billed $2 a month.

The NOW account is one more step toward the family financial center concept, said Ron Keener of the Illinois Savings and Loan League. The service augments consumer lending, auto loans and other services aggressive S&Ls offer to their customers, Keener said.

The family financial center concept is the only thing that will keep the industry alive in the long run, predicts Gerald Rogers, Naperville Savings and Loan Assn. president. Rogers said the ¼ per cent advantage that S&Ls can claim over banks for savings interest payments "is going to fade away and we better be ready for it."

Dow loses 2.3 points, trading slow

NEW YORK (UPI) — The stock market, faced with a slowed-down economy and declining interest rates, drifted lower Monday in slow trading on the New York Stock Exchange because of a lack of bidding.

Investors displayed little emotion over Commerce Dept. reports that construction spending rose 1.6 per cent in June and that inventories increased 1.2 per cent, the largest surge in 18 months. Factory orders remained unchanged.

Some buying early in the day followed news most of the nation's major banks, continuing a trend begun last week, were lowering their prime lending rate for business loans a quarter point to 7 per cent. The early surge, however, dried up drapidly.

AS A RESULT, the Dow Jones industrial average, up about a point at the outset, lost 2.38 points to 982.26. It gained 5.35 points Friday, snapping a three-day losing streak.

The NYSE common stock index lost 0.13 to 55.13 and the average price of an NYSE common share decreased by eight cents.

Breadth figures revealed the uncertainty existing among investors. Of the 1,815 issues crossing the tape, 697 declined, 630 advanced and 488 remained unchanged.

Volume totaled 13,870,000 shares, down from the 14,830,000 traded Friday. Last week's trading was the slowest of the year.

Standard & Poor's new 500-stock index, which includes some over-the-counter stocks, lost 0.25 to 103.19.

Prices closed lower in moderate trading on the American Stock Exchange. The average price of an Amex share decreased by four cents. Volume totaled 1,800,000 shares, compared with 1,518,000 traded Friday.

Economic recovery to continue: report

The Congressional Budget Office Monday agreed with the White House in predicting the nation's moderate economic recovery would continue through 1977.

"The recovery appears to be solid if not especially rapid," said budget office director Alice Rivlin. Among the report's specific projections:

- An unemployment rate of 6.9 to 7.3 per cent by the end of the year, and from 5.8 to 6.4 per cent by the end of 1977;
- A rise in the inflation rate of 5 to 7 per cent for the next year and a half, roughly the same as the 5.5 per cent rate during the first year of recovery;
- The gross National Product, adjusted for the effects of inflation, will rise 5 to 6.5 per cent during the remainder of the year and 4.5 to 6.5 per cent during 1977.

Coal strike losing support

A wildcat coal mine strike which idled as many as 80,000 miners last week showed signs of losing support Monday as miners in Ohio, Kentucky and Virginia began returning to work. But from southern West Virginia, where the walkout began in mid-July, picketing by dissidents spread across the state, shutting down coal production. Miners in the north had voted to go back to work, but pickets closed their mines, prompting a call for strong action by United Mine Workers District 31 Pres. June Floyd of Fairmont.

UAW president attends talks

United Auto Workers Pres. Leonard Woodcock attended the opening round of contract negotiations with Deere and Co. Monday to "signify the importance of these negotiations to the whole union." Woodcock and UAW international vice president Pat Greathouse led a 24-member union bargaining team at Moline which will attempt to work out a new three-year master contract for 27,000 Deere employes.

Galaxy Carpet Mills, Inc., Elk Grove Village, reported a 69 per cent gain in profits for the 39 weeks ended June 26. Irwin Harvey, president, said net income reached $674,000 or 36 cents a share compared to $399,000 or 21 cents a share the previous period. Net sales for the period amounted to $47,073,000. For the third quarter of the year ended June 26, the carpet producers earned $439,000 or 24 cents a share on sales of $17,064,000.

Supply firms earnings up

American Hospital Supply Corp. reported record sales, earnings and earnings per share for the first half and second quarter of the year. Karl D. Bays, chairman and chief executive officer, said net sales for the first half of the year reached $642,767,000 compared to year-earlier $543,426,000.

Net earnings totaled $31,994,000 compared to $24,140,000 one year ago. Earnings per share amounted to 85 cents, compared to 65 cents for the first six months of 1975. For the three months ending June 30, net sales were $332,688,000 and net earnings totaled $15,407,000 or 41 cents a share. The firm has a facility in Mount Prospect.

"Satisfaction comes when you know you've done a thorough, accurate job of reporting, no matter how tough the circumstances."

That's how police reporter David T. Ibata sums up a meaningful day's work in the newspaper business. Dave, who covers police and fire departments in Palatine, Schaumburg, Hoffman Estates, Rolling Meadows and Arlington Heights, counts the recent Columbo family slayings as among the most sobering and memorable experiences in his young career. "It's exciting to keep up with breaking news," Dave says, "but this triple homicide — and the brutal circumstances surrounding it — is enough to age any decent cop or reporter several years in a few months' time."

As part of his job as police reporter, Dave also covers fires, storms, riots, accidents, diasters, court cases and departmental developments.

Dave is a 1975 graduate of Southern Illinois University, where he was on the dean's list and worked as editor-in-chief of the campus newspaper, The Daily Egyptian. He joined The Herald in 1975 and served as a copy editor prior to his present role. His "extra" duties include reviewing Ravinia concerts this summer.

Vitamins prescribed when on special diet

My husband and I are each 50 years old. He is on a low cholesterol diet which I also use. Now we are both anemic. My question is how can we both get 18 milligrams of iron daily when the greatest sources of iron are in organ foods.

There are five milligrams of iron in one cup of cooked mature bean seeds and four milligrams in a cup of cooked spinach. Neither contains cholesterol. Cook in iron pots and skillets. You'll get some iron from them.

Finally, I don't see why people with special considerations for their diet, as your husband has, need worry so much about getting all the vitamins and minerals they need from food intake. There is nothing wrong with taking one of the standard daily vitamin tablets with iron that you can get at the grocery store. Check the label and you'll find that those with iron usually contain 18 milligrams of iron. That could certainly make life easier for you.

Incidentally, I think anyone with an anemia should find out what is causing it. Is it really because of an iron deficiency? Is it another form of anemia that requires a different treatment, or is it related to an important blood loss? Your doctor can find out for you.

To give you more information on anemias, I am sending you The Health Letter number 4-3, Understanding the Anemias. Others who want this information can send a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope with 50 cents for it. Just address your letter to me in care of Paddock Publications, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

We had a talk in our health class about some of the stars of the sports world using blood transfusions of their own blood to give them the extra help needed to do the event they are in. Could you tell me how this works?

For the most part it doesn't work. The idea is to withdraw some of the person's blood and store it. Meanwhile the body replaces the blood that has been withdrawn. Then just before the endurance event, such as long distance running, the original blood is transfused back into the person.

This will temporarily increase the volume of blood in the circulation. The whole concept is based on the idea that the amount of work a trained person can do is limited by the amount of oxygen delivered to the working muscles. The amount of oxygen delivered is dependent upon how much blood is pumped to the muscles. The reason the concept is a failure is that the amount of blood pumped is dependent upon the heart's capacity to pump blood. The increased number of red blood cells by the transfusion mechanism does not really improve oxygen delivery enough to make any important difference. Carefully controlled laboratory experiments have shown this.

I think there might be one important exception. The athlete who is going to compete at high altitude and has not trained at high altitude before competition might get some benefit from the temporary increase in red blood cells. A better idea, though, is to train at high altitude if you are going to compete there.

In summary then, the practice of "blood doping" that you are asking about has proved to be fairly useless and I do not approve of it.

Make-ahead cooks like these zucchini recipes

Dear Dorothy: It's clear you're a zucchini buff. Got any "shorty" recipes that can be made ahead — the kind that would still taste as if freshly prepared? —Helene Von Hoffman

Here are two. Both came from Katherine Peden. With the first, slice unpeeled zucchini very thin, soak in water for a short time, then drain in a colander. Make a mixture of one cup flour, one teaspoon sugar and three-fourths teaspoon salt. Dip each piece into this, shake well and fry until golden brown in buttered vegetable oil. Drain on a paper towel. These can be made ahead and warmed just before serving.

The second recipe is a salad that you can have on hand constantly. Slice several unpeeled zucchini very thin and soak in salted water for an hour. Drain and put into a jar and then add your favorite French dressing. Refrigerate, turning the jar upside down occasionally. It seems to keep indefinitely. And as the supply gets short, you can add to it. Anything easier?

Dear Dorothy: Our children are grown and gone and I've decided to get rid of the plastic dishes and odds and ends and maybe get some ironstone dishes for everyday use. However, I'd like to know if this type of pottery is overproof. —Mrs. E. Roghair.

It's ovenproof only if it says so specifically on the piece. There are many varieties of ironstone and some are more durable than others. Some now are also microwave-oven proof. But it has to say so.

Dear Dorothy: I do believe that the handiest tip I've ever gotten is how to get a broken light bulb out of a socket. It's just to use a piece of wet soap — press in and turn the bulb out of the socket. —Marietta Millstone

Foster parent: two views

Foster father must be a 'dad,' not a buddy

by BONITA BRODT

(Second of two parts)

Foster parenting is not without its pitfalls.

The role can require serious adjustments in a person's lifestyle. Great demands are placed on personal time. Foster parenting can be filled with disappointments when the best intentions turn sour, when a person gives his all to a youth needing help and receives little in return.

And Mark (not his real name) knows those pitfalls well.

A single man of 22, Mark has been a foster parent to 16-year-old Nick for about five months now. Through the transitional living foster parent program at Omni-House in Wheeling, Mark made arrangements to open up his Wheeling apartment to Nick in April and has been adjusting ever since.

BUT FORTUNATELY, Mark has fared well with his adjustments. He has worked out the difficulties with no long term damage to his relationship with Nick. They take one obstacle at a time, trying to learn from each, and in ironing out problems, but have developed a strong personal relationship.

One of Mark's biggest problems was entering the relationship as a buddy rather than a foster parent.

"That was my biggest mistake," he said, as he leaned back on the sofa in his comfortable apartment and remembered his first months with Nick.

"We didn't have a single problem for about four weeks — everything was as smooth as silk — then the walls fell in," he said.

"I WAS JUST too much of a buddy instead of a person to look up to, and that was my fault. Nothing got done around the house and he was always bringing his friends over.

"The friends were 15 and 16 years old; most of them still lived at home. I think Nick would see that they didn't have to work, and it was easy for him to slip — easy for him to say 'Well, if they don't have to, why do I?' "

"At first, Nick approached this whole thing like it was a free ride. It took a lot for me to change the buddy image into a person to look up to," Mark said.

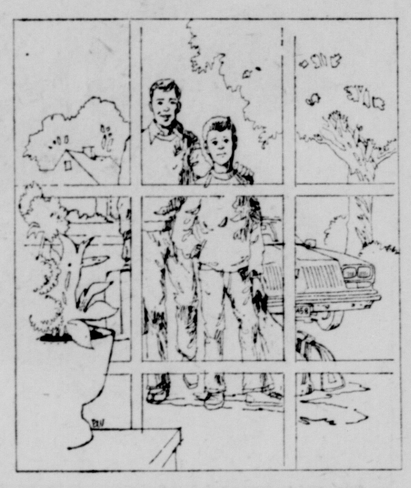

The first night that Nick came to stay with Mark, they sat up all night and talked, just learning about one another. From there, they have progressed to a relationship where one can honestly tell the other when something is wrong.

ANOTHER PROBLEM for Mark was that he lost a lot of his solitude at home with Nick living in the house.

"For the most part, I still do the things that I did before Nick came. But there is a lot that I cannot do. For a while, I almost hated coming home. I found myself answering to him, having to explain why I got home late and where I had been. It was like he was my guardian," he said.

"He always wanted to do something with me, and that can get a little tiring. I reached the point where we did things together too much, my friends started to wonder what had happened to me, and Nick and I were fighting all the time because we were together so much," Mark said.

At that point in the relationship, Mark made it clear to Nick that he wanted the youth to learn how to live independently and not have to depend on another.

"AND THAT helped him. Now, we do things together, like go to an occasional movie, but it's not all the time. Both of us have to have our separate lives; he can learn the most from that," Mark said.

Mark has helped Nick to establish some goals in the youth's life, such as finding a stable job, opening a bank account and managing money. They both share apartment chores. Mark is somewhat strict about Nick's friends in the apartment, because he doesn't want Nick to backslide.

"Nick will be reaching his goals before his friends reach theirs. He's been avoiding a lot of his friends lately who he knows will bring him down from those goals. He has to learn responsibility just like every other 16-year-old — but he has to do it two times faster than the others," Mark said.

Mark also had problems managing his own money for the first few months.

"I NEVER expected that to happen," Mark said about his money problems. "I was in a bad financial bind for the first few months. Roughly, the difference between what I would spend on my own and what I spent with Nick here was $800," he said.

And he splurged on Nick, they dined out, drove more places which doubled the gas bill and saw several movies.

Mark, who is in advertising promotions, said his bank account today is just about where it should be. He is reimbursed by the state about $200 per month for the foster care. "It's hard to explain where that goes, but it does," he said.

Has Mark ever resented having a foster child?

"IT'S CROSSED my mind," he said. "Sometimes I have just wanted to be alone. I was tired of helping him. There's not a day that passes that I don't have to be a constant help. I like to do that, but sometimes a person wants to relax."

"There are times when I will come home, want to lie down or maybe read, and Nick can't understand that. He comes in, wants to talk, and sometimes I have to just get up and leave," he said.

"But it is a give and take relationship. I enjoy helping him, and want to see him make it. We have a good relationship; it's one we've worked on. We've had our problems — who hasn't? — but, you learn from them. That makes it worthwhile."

Son learns you work for what you want

"If I didn't have Mark, I wouldn't be sitting here right now," Nick said, as he lit a cigaret and pushed his long, dark hair away from his eyes.

"I probably would have taken off to another state, got into some big trouble and had a (criminal) record by now. But Mark has helped me to realize that's not the way it should be. Today, with his help, I am getting some things accomplished that I never thought I could do," he said.

Nick (not his real name) had just finished work and we were sitting in a booth together in the Wheeling restaurant where he is employed. Nick, 16, has worked as a cook there for about three weeks now, which is about three weeks longer than he has stuck with any of the four jobs he has had since April.

"IT TOOK A lot of pushing to get me in line, but I appreciate that now," Nick said. "Mark helped me get this job, like he's helped me do so many other things. I have a reputation for being lazy; maybe that's why the other jobs didn't work," he said.

But this time it will be different.

"I've learned how to be honest with myself," he said. "Before, I was going about things the whole wrong way. I used to be the biggest liar and thief that you ever saw. I took everything I wanted — bikes, albums — just because I couldn't get them any other way."

"But today I haven't got a worry in the world," Nick said.

"I have funds rolling in — I just opened a bank account. I am saving money so I can have a car of my own and an apartment with all my own furniture. I am going to be able to say that things are mine and I worked for them. And I would never have been able to do that if Mark hadn't helped me realize how to manage money."

NICK, WHO GREW up in Arlington Heights, said that he is more at home with Mark than he has ever been with anyone else. When he was two years old, his parents were divorced. He lived alone with his father for 13 years. His father then remarried, and for Nick, that's when most everything fell apart.

"I just couldn't live there. I was always in trouble — a cop was always at our house because I had stolen something. And my dad beat me — he just seemed to take things out on me. My stepmother, too. I fought in court to get away."

Nick has been in a foster home in Des Plaines along with eight foster children, and the Maryville Academy since then. He disliked both placements.

He said that living with Mark is one of the best things that has ever happened to him.

"I WISH THAT every kid with my kind of problems could live with a guy like this. I have never had a better friend than Mark. I know everything about him, and he knows everything about me.

"I never want to steal because I know I have my own money. One time, Mark left the whole rent money, $300, in the drawer, and a little voice said to me, 'go ahead, you can take it.' But I didn't — I know that's not how to do things. You have to work for what you want."

Nick still visits his father, sometimes gets along well with him. "Sometimes, he is in a good mood and will sit down and talk with me. Other times, it's like he doesn't want me around. I visit him, but I can't live there," he said.

Nick enjoys music, and has budgeted his money so he can buy one album a month. He pays for the entire electrical bill for their Wheeling apartment out of his work money, and also pays for some of the laundry. He shares household chores with Mark, but admits he sometimes has to be prodded to finish them.

AND FOR THE first time, he is happy with his life.

"Most happy," he nodded. "I am confident of myself for the first time — confident that I am really worth something and that I can do something. Mark is willing to give me the chance so I can do something with my life.

Nick said he wants to move to either Colorado, or Canada in a few years, and maybe run his own restaurant.

Nick is pleased that his relationship with Mark has fared so well.

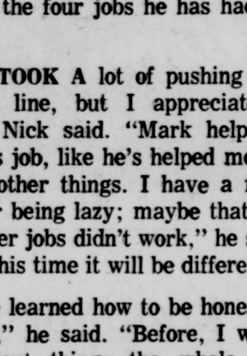

"I was really scared at first that we wouldn't work out — that he wouldn't like me. But it has worked. We have had our hassles, and some of them have been big ones. And most of them have been when I begin to slip back into the person I used to be. Sometimes, I have threatened to get up and walk out, but Mark knows I won't leave. He's the best thing that's ever happened to me, and I will never forget that.

Check the label and you'll find that those with iron usually contain 18 milligrams of iron. That could certainly make life easier for you.

Incidentally, I think anyone with an anemia should find out what is causing it. Is it really because of an iron deficiency? Is it another form of anemia that requires a different treatment, or is it related to an important blood loss? Your doctor can find out for you.

To give you more information on anemias, I am sending you The Health Letter number 4-3, Understanding the Anemias. Others who want this information can send a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope with 50 cents for it. Just address your letter to me in care of Paddock Publications, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

We had a talk in our health class about some of the stars of the sports world using blood transfusions of their own blood to give them the extra help needed to do the event they are in. Could you tell me how this works?

For the most part it doesn't work. The idea is to withdraw some of the person's blood and store it. Meanwhile the body replaces the blood that has been withdrawn. Then just before the endurance event, such as long distance running, the original blood is transfused back into the person.

This will temporarily increase the volume of blood in the circulation. The whole concept is based on the idea that the amount of work a trained person can do is limited by the amount of oxygen delivered to the working muscles. The amount of oxygen delivered is dependent upon how much blood is pumped to the muscles. The reason the concept is a failure is that the amount of blood pumped is dependent upon the heart's capacity to pump blood. The increased number of red blood cells by the transfusion mechanism does not really improve oxygen delivery enough to make any important difference. Carefully controlled laboratory experiments have shown this.

I think there might be one important exception. The athlete who is going to compete at high altitude and has not trained at high altitude before competition might get some benefit from the temporary increase in red blood cells. A better idea, though, is to train at high altitude if you are going to compete there.

In summary then, the practice of "blood doping" that you are asking about has proved to be fairly useless and I do not approve of it.

Make-ahead cooks like these zucchini recipes

Dear Dorothy: It's clear you're a zucchini buff. Got any "shorty" recipes that can be made ahead — the kind that would still taste as if freshly prepared? —Helene Von Hoffman

Here are two. Both came from Katherine Peden. With the first, slice unpeeled zucchini very thin, soak in water for a short time, then drain in a colander. Make a mixture of one cup flour, one teaspoon sugar and three-fourths teaspoon salt. Dip each piece into this, shake well and fry until golden brown in buttered vegetable oil. Drain on a paper towel. These can be made ahead and warmed just before serving.

The second recipe is a salad that you can have on hand constantly. Slice several unpeeled zucchini very thin and soak in salted water for an hour. Drain and put into a jar and then add your favorite French dressing. Refrigerate, turning the jar upside down occasionally. It seems to keep indefinitely. And as the supply gets short, you can add to it. Anything easier?

Dear Dorothy: Our children are grown and gone and I've decided to get rid of the plastic dishes and odds and ends and maybe get some ironstone dishes for everyday use. However, I'd like to know if this type of pottery is overproof. —Mrs. E. Roghair.

It's ovenproof only if it says so specifically on the piece. There are many varieties of ironstone and some are more durable than others. Some now are also microwave-oven proof. But it has to say so.

Dear Dorothy: I do believe that the handiest tip I've ever gotten is how to get a broken light bulb out of a socket. It's just to use a piece of wet soap — press in and turn the bulb out of the socket. —Marietta Millstone

Foster parent: two views

Foster father must be a 'dad,' not a buddy

by BONITA BRODT

(Second of two parts)

Foster parenting is not without its pitfalls.

The role can require serious adjustments in a person's lifestyle. Great demands are placed on personal time. Foster parenting can be filled with disappointments when the best intentions turn sour, when a person gives his all to a youth needing help and receives little in return.

And Mark (not his real name) knows those pitfalls well.

A single man of 22, Mark has been a foster parent to 16-year-old Nick for about five months now. Through the transitional living foster parent program at Omni-House in Wheeling, Mark made arrangements to open up his Wheeling apartment to Nick in April and has been adjusting ever since.

BUT FORTUNATELY, Mark has fared well with his adjustments. He has worked out the difficulties with no long term damage to his relationship with Nick. They take one obstacle at a time, trying to learn from each, and in ironing out problems, but have developed a strong personal relationship.

One of Mark's biggest problems was entering the relationship as a buddy rather than a foster parent.

"That was my biggest mistake," he said, as he leaned back on the sofa in his comfortable apartment and remembered his first months with Nick.

"We didn't have a single problem for about four weeks — everything was as smooth as silk — then the walls fell in," he said.

"I WAS JUST too much of a buddy instead of a person to look up to, and that was my fault. Nothing got done around the house and he was always bringing his friends over.

"The friends were 15 and 16 years old; most of them still lived at home. I think Nick would see that they didn't have to work, and it was easy for him to slip — easy for him to say 'Well, if they don't have to, why do I?' "

"At first, Nick approached this whole thing like it was a free ride. It took a lot for me to change the buddy image into a person to look up to," Mark said.

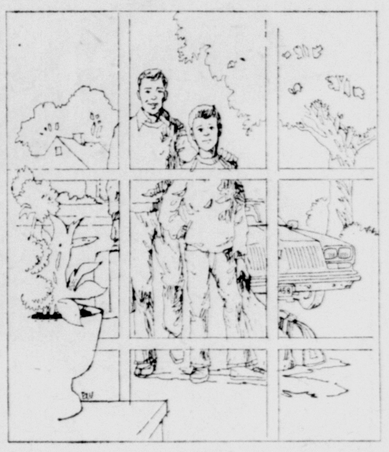

The first night that Nick came to stay with Mark, they sat up all night and talked, just learning about one another. From there, they have progressed to a relationship where one can honestly tell the other when something is wrong.

ANOTHER PROBLEM for Mark was that he lost a lot of his solitude at home with Nick living in the house.

"For the most part, I still do the things that I did before Nick came. But there is a lot that I cannot do. For a while, I almost hated coming home. I found myself answering to him, having to explain why I got home late and where I had been. It was like he was my guardian," he said.

"He always wanted to do something with me, and that can get a little tiring. I reached the point where we did things together too much, my friends started to wonder what had happened to me, and Nick and I were fighting all the time because we were together so much," Mark said.

At that point in the relationship, Mark made it clear to Nick that he wanted the youth to learn how to live independently and not have to depend on another.

"AND THAT helped him. Now, we do things together, like go to an occasional movie, but it's not all the time. Both of us have to have our separate lives; he can learn the most from that," Mark said.

Mark has helped Nick to establish some goals in the youth's life, such as finding a stable job, opening a bank account and managing money. They both share apartment chores. Mark is somewhat strict about Nick's friends in the apartment, because he doesn't want Nick to backslide.

"Nick will be reaching his goals before his friends reach theirs. He's been avoiding a lot of his friends lately who he knows will bring him down from those goals. He has to learn responsibility just like every other 16-year-old — but he has to do it two times faster than the others," Mark said.

Mark also had problems managing his own money for the first few months.

"I NEVER expected that to happen," Mark said about his money problems. "I was in a bad financial bind for the first few months. Roughly, the difference between what I would spend on my own and what I spent with Nick here was $800," he said.

And he splurged on Nick, they dined out, drove more places which doubled the gas bill and saw several movies.

Mark, who is in advertising promotions, said his bank account today is just about where it should be. He is reimbursed by the state about $200 per month for the foster care. "It's hard to explain where that goes, but it does," he said.

Has Mark ever resented having a foster child?

"IT'S CROSSED my mind," he said. "Sometimes I have just wanted to be alone. I was tired of helping him. There's not a day that passes that I don't have to be a constant help. I like to do that, but sometimes a person wants to relax."

"There are times when I will come home, want to lie down or maybe read, and Nick can't understand that. He comes in, wants to talk, and sometimes I have to just get up and leave," he said.

"But it is a give and take relationship. I enjoy helping him, and want to see him make it. We have a good relationship; it's one we've worked on. We've had our problems — who hasn't? — but, you learn from them. That makes it worthwhile."

Son learns you work for what you want

"If I didn't have Mark, I wouldn't be sitting here right now," Nick said, as he lit a cigaret and pushed his long, dark hair away from his eyes.

"I probably would have taken off to another state, got into some big trouble and had a (criminal) record by now. But Mark has helped me to realize that's not the way it should be. Today, with his help, I am getting some things accomplished that I never thought I could do," he said.

Nick (not his real name) had just finished work and we were sitting in a booth together in the Wheeling restaurant where he is employed. Nick, 16, has worked as a cook there for about three weeks now, which is about three weeks longer than he has stuck with any of the four jobs he has had since April.

"IT TOOK A lot of pushing to get me in line, but I appreciate that now," Nick said. "Mark helped me get this job, like he's helped me do so many other things. I have a reputation for being lazy; maybe that's why the other jobs didn't work," he said.

But this time it will be different.

"I've learned how to be honest with myself," he said. "Before, I was going about things the whole wrong way. I used to be the biggest liar and thief that you ever saw. I took everything I wanted — bikes, albums — just because I couldn't get them any other way."

"But today I haven't got a worry in the world," Nick said.

"I have funds rolling in — I just opened a bank account. I am saving money so I can have a car of my own and an apartment with all my own furniture. I am going to be able to say that things are mine and I worked for them. And I would never have been able to do that if Mark hadn't helped me realize how to manage money."

NICK, WHO GREW up in Arlington Heights, said that he is more at home with Mark than he has ever been with anyone else. When he was two years old, his parents were divorced. He lived alone with his father for 13 years. His father then remarried, and for Nick, that's when most everything fell apart.

"I just couldn't live there. I was always in trouble — a cop was always at our house because I had stolen something. And my dad beat me — he just seemed to take things out on me. My stepmother, too. I fought in court to get away."

Nick has been in a foster home in Des Plaines along with eight foster children, and the Maryville Academy since then. He disliked both placements.

He said that living with Mark is one of the best things that has ever happened to him.

"I WISH THAT every kid with my kind of problems could live with a guy like this. I have never had a better friend than Mark. I know everything about him, and he knows everything about me.

"I never want to steal because I know I have my own money. One time, Mark left the whole rent money, $300, in the drawer, and a little voice said to me, 'go ahead, you can take it.' But I didn't — I know that's not how to do things. You have to work for what you want."

Nick still visits his father, sometimes gets along well with him. "Sometimes, he is in a good mood and will sit down and talk with me. Other times, it's like he doesn't want me around. I visit him, but I can't live there," he said.

Nick enjoys music, and has budgeted his money so he can buy one album a month. He pays for the entire electrical bill for their Wheeling apartment out of his work money, and also pays for some of the laundry. He shares household chores with Mark, but admits he sometimes has to be prodded to finish them.

AND FOR THE first time, he is happy with his life.

"Most happy," he nodded. "I am confident of myself for the first time — confident that I am really worth something and that I can do something. Mark is willing to give me the chance so I can do something with my life.

Nick said he wants to move to either Colorado, or Canada in a few years, and maybe run his own restaurant.

Nick is pleased that his relationship with Mark has fared so well.

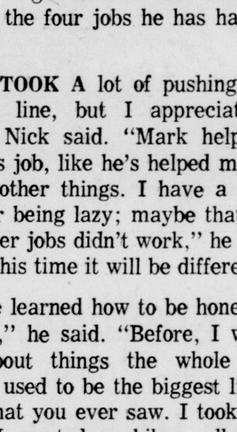

"I was really scared at first that we wouldn't work out — that he wouldn't like me. But it has worked. We have had our hassles, and some of them have been big ones. And most of them have been when I begin to slip back into the person I used to be. Sometimes, I have threatened to get up and walk out, but Mark knows I won't leave. He's the best thing that's ever happened to me, and I will never forget that.

Luzinski speaks with his actions

born slugger. "I haven't the slightest idea what I'd be doing if I wasn't playing baseball. I was just fortunate to be talented enough to play in the majors.

"OH, IT'S A TOUGH life," Greg admitted. "People think that it's glamorous and there's all the travel and everything. Actually, you're away from your family an awful lot."

Luzinski's wife and two small children live in New Jersey and Greg gets to see them only when the team swings east.

But Greg's next favorite place is his hometown, playing baseball in Wrigley Field against his boyhood idols.

"I was a Cub fan," Luzinski said smiling slightly. "I've seen many games from the spectators' viewpoint. Now I'm seeing it from the other side. I like it."

HE OUGHT TO LIKE IT, especially in tiny Wrigley Field when the wind is blowing out. Luzinski has hammered more than his share of home runs against local pitching — with or without the wind's aid.

"My home runs come in bunches," he continued. "I hit my homers in streaks. When I'm not in a hot streak for homers, I just try to meet the ball and drive in runs. You can't be trying for home runs all the time."

It seems like only yesterday that Greg was playing baseball for Larry Nomellini's Logan Square Lions, battling it out with teammates and foes like Jerry Donahue, Dave Kingman and Tom Lundstedt.

ACTUALLY, IT WAS a long time ago and the road has been rough for Greg: five years of struggling through the Phils' minor league system, fighting for a starting major league spot, coming back after a serious knee injury that could have crippled him.

Today Greg is knocking at the door to superstardom. He led the league with 120 RBIs last season. He came to town with a .307 batting average. His salary is in the six-figure range.

One goal has escaped Luzinski — and his teammates — for the past three seasons. That is a world championship.

"We're 13 games out in front with 60 to play. We just have to play them one at a time."

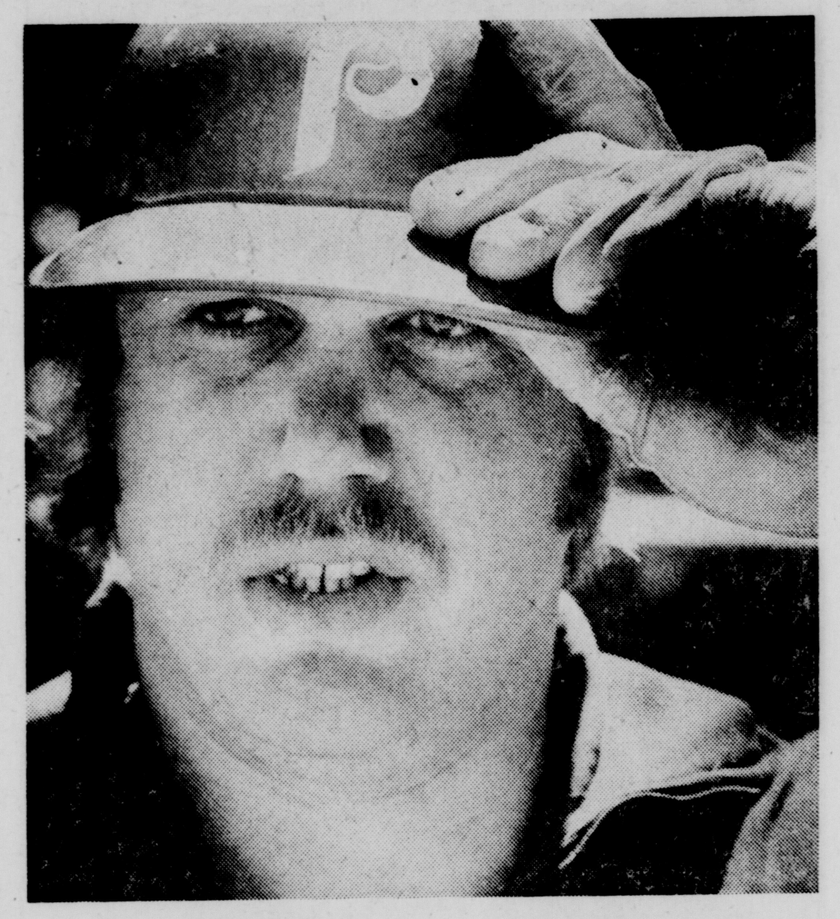

And that's what Luzinski will do — play them one at a time, even if his teammates choose to do otherwise. But that's not likely since Greg is a quiet leader of this team.

"STEADY," said Pitcher Jim Lonborg, repeating it once or twice. "He's steady. Steady at the plate, steady in the clubhouse. He's a rock. He's just not given to highs and lows. He's learned somehow to put a lid on his emotions. Whether he strikes out or hits a homer, he rarely shows emotion."

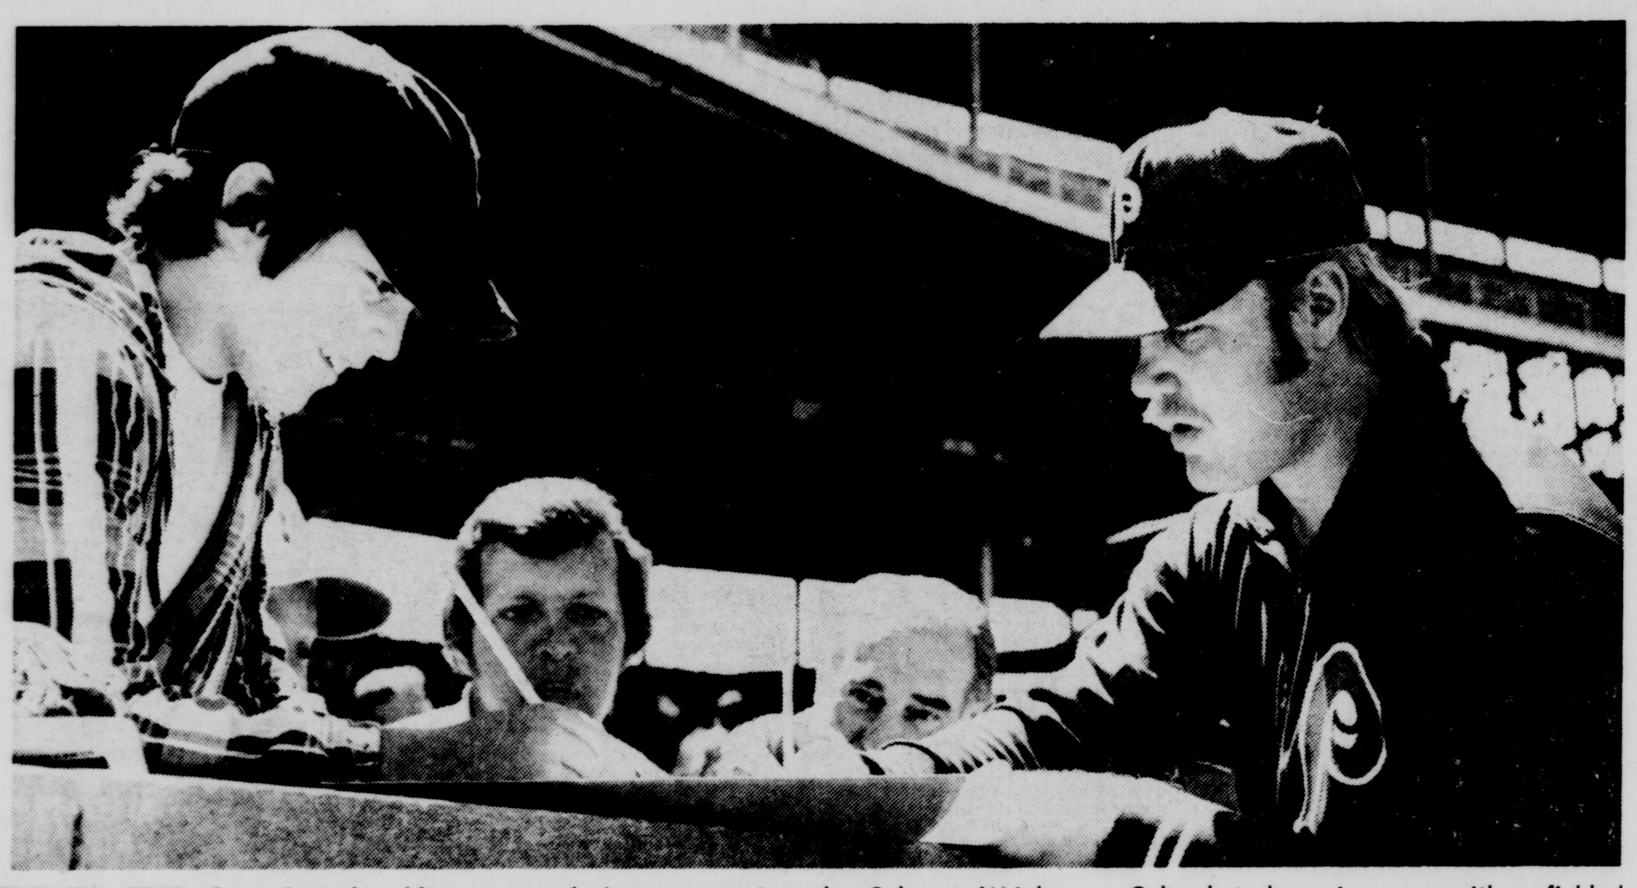

That kind of influence is appreciated on a team fighting for a pennant. And above all, Greg Luzinski is a team player.

"Of course, in baseball you're always playing for the team," said Greg. "It's a team game. But at the same time you're also playing for yourself. The individual honors, the statistics, come at the end. But if it's a winning team, those individual things will be there. That's the way it is on this team." Luzinski finished talking, unwrapped a piece of chewing gum, and popped it in his mouth.

He was through talking — with his mouth. Now he would let his bat speak for him, loud and clear.

PROSPECT HEIGHTS native Greg Luzinski of the Philadelphia Phillies adjusts his helmet during batting practice at Wrigley Field Monday. Luzinski is hitting .306 with the division leading Phillies.

PHILLIES' STAR Greg Luzinski obliges a young fan with an autograph prior to Monday's game against the Cubs at Wrigley Field. Luzinski went 0-for-4 against the Cubs, but drove in a run with a fielder's choice. The Cubs won the game, 4-2.

Bonham, Cubs motor past Phils

Bill Bonham, who spent the last quiet moments before Monday's game reading an automotive parts magazine, put the hammer down on his pitching arm to throttle the Cubs to a 4-2 triumph over the runaway division-leading Philadelphia Phillies.

Using the combustion of Pete LaCock's decisive first-inning home run with a man aboard and Joe Coleman's flawless relief, Bonham proceeded to throw a monkey wrench into Philadelphia's smooth running gears to earn his seventh triumph in 16 decisions and extending the Cub winning streak to four straight.

Bonham changed speeds effectively and kept the Phillies spinning their wheels with a tailing fastball and hump-backed change-up.

The Cubs also benefitted from a prevailing northeast wind that relegated a Mike Schmidt rocket to the warning track and blew three Cub fly balls out of reach of Phillie outfielders.

The refreshing 13-mile per hour breeze fooled Jay Johnstone as Joe Wallis' leadoff fly ball landed safely in right field for a single.

John Summers, a last minute replacement for Jose Cardenal, flied to left, but Bill Madlock improved his .318 batting average with a double down the third base line.

Jerry Morales scored Wallis while Madlock was being run down between second and third before LaCock picked on a belt-high Jim Lonborg fastball, driving it onto the rightfield catwalk for his sixth round tripper.

The Phillies rebounded for a pair in the third on back-to-back singles by Dave Cash and Larry Bowa, Schmidt's double into the Cub bullpen and an infield roller by Greg Luzinski.

Bonham and Coleman served goose eggs the rest of the way.

Bonham was lifted in the seventh when he walked Dave Cash and Larry Bowa singled with one out. Coleman side-armed his way out of the jam and popped his clutch again in the eighth after yielding a leadoff double to Jay Johnstone and balking him to third with nobody down.

The Cubs added an insurance run in the sixth on successive wind-blown doubles by Manny Trillo and George Mitterwald to chase Lonborg, but his successor Gene Garber held the Cubs hitless the rest of the way.

With an even 10,000 fans on hand, the Cubs tagged Lonborg with his sixth defeat against 12 triumphs. The two clubs will clash again today in a doubleheader beginning at noon.

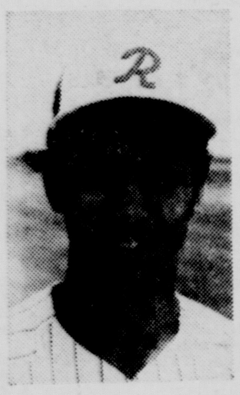

Rick Reuschel (9-8) and Steve Stone (2-3) will try to prolong the Cub win streak to six.

Day's bat simmers in Rebel doubleheader

In the two doubleheaders played by the Northwest Rebels over the weekend one of the few similarities between the pair was that they split each one.

Against the Chicago Stars Saturday, 26 total runs scored with the Rebels winning the opener, 8-3, and the Stars taking the second game, 11-4.

On the following day, with the Skokie Indians as the opponents, only three total runs were recorded. The Rebels again won the opener, 2-0 in 12 innings, but lost the second game, 1-0.

Weak defense hurt the Rebels in both losses. Rick Marino started the second game Saturday and only three of the nine runs he allowed were earned.

The one run that beat the Rebels Sunday was also unearned.

In the opener Saturday, the Rebels used a big five-run fifth inning to defeat the Stars. Mike Quade started it off by reaching on an error followed by a single from Scott Day. A walk to Bruce Hanson loaded the bases.

Dean Sheridan drove in Quade with a single before Bruce Eberle's double brought in two more runs. The two RBIs gave Eberle a total of 30 for the season, a career high for him which is leading the team.

Singles hit by John Theriault and Bill Bulthuis completed the inning.

Willie Kozel pitched the first six innings to get the victory, upping his record to 6-1. Ray Gross got a save.

Green worked the first eight innings while Good handled the final four to earn the 2-0, 12-inning win.

The Rebels scored two runs in the top of the 12th. With one out, Sheridan singled, Eberle was hit by a pitch and Theriault picked up an infield single to load the bases.

Good brought in the first run with a walk before Day's sacrifice fly scored the other.

Even though the team batting average dipped a little during the weekend, the Rebels are still hitting at a .303 clip.

The GIBL playoffs are scheduled for August 14-15 with the top eight teams playing single elimination. The Rebels are the defending champions.

Woody, OSU football under attack

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI) — Ohio State Athletic Director Ed Weaver said Monday he had no knowledge of financial transactions alleged to have occurred between various Ohio State alumni and others for transporting prospective student-athletes to the campus for recruiting visits.

The State News, the Michigan State University student newspaper, said it had learned from a source "close to the Buckeye grid scene for several years" that football boosters made such cash payments. It cited an instance of two police officers from Warren, Ohio, receiving payments from a member of an OSU alumni group of $75 and $60 respectively to drive football prospects to Columbus.

"To the best of our knowledge, the students in question received only one 'paid' visit to the OSU campus during the time they were being recruited — the one authorized by the rules," Weaver said in a brief statement. "We have no knowledge of the financial transactions which were alleged to have occurred between various Ohio State alumni and others.

"The allegations reported to have been printed in the Michigan State student newspaper appear to be vague.

"Different sets of NCAA and Big Ten rules were in effect at the various times mentioned, and we are not at all certain as to what the precise violations are alleged to be."

Officials here, he said, "have not received any notification by either the NCAA or the Big Ten that charges of any kind have been brought against Ohio State University or that we are the subject of any kind of investigative proceeding."

The Michigan State University student newspaper contended in its copyrighted story that the payments amounted to violations of NCAA and Big Ten recruiting rules.

The story followed an admission by OSU Coach Woody Hayes in Chicago Friday that he supplied information on football recruiting violations at Michigan State to the NCAA, launching an investigation that culminated with the Spartans being placed on three years probation. The NCAA sanctions against Michigan State also resulted in the firing of Spartan head football Coach Denny Stolz.

The State News said that, when confronted with the allegations, Hayes responded: "Then you better print it, mister. I have a very good lawyer and I would be glad to take you to court."

"I know nothing about it at all," Big Ten Commissioner Wayne Duke told the newspaper. "I have no information at all. I'd have to look at the rules at that time. I can't see where it represents any great deal."

Foolish Pleasure to honor rain check

by JIM COOK

Turf Editor

It appears as if Horse of the Year candidate Foolish Pleasure, who accepted a rain check earlier this month, will honor that commitment with an appearance in Saturday's $125,000 Arlington Golden Invitational.

The race, which wasn't on the original stakes schedule, is the brain child of Joseph Joyce, Jr. who has assumed the position of Chairman of the Board for Arlington-Washington Park Race Tracks Corp.

Acting as the ringmaster in Arlington's new circus atmosphere which has already drawn such side-show acts as the Playboy bunnies, Harlem Globetrotters and a bevy of National Basketball Assn. stars, Joyce may stage the "Greatest Show" in Arlington's 110-day meeting.

The event, which with a little luck could rival the Arlington Invitational and Secretariat's appearance two years ago, will commemorate the track's 50 years in operation.

The stature of the race, though, will depend upon its constituents. Foolish Pleasure was initially scheduled to go to post in the Washington Park Handicap July 17, but poor weather grounded the 4-year-old colt's plane in New York.

Trainer Leroy Jolley's gem, however, has already accepted the invitation and track officials are hopeful that the former Kentucky Derby winner will be bedded down in the local barns by Wednesday.

Others who are expected to honor out-of-state invitations are multiple stakes winner Double Edge Sword, Festive Mood and El Pitirre.

Two-time horse of the year, Forego, was invited, but has a filled leg and will be out of action for some time.

Another racing millionaire, Dahlia, will send word as to her status as will handicap stars Avatar, Lord Rebeau, American History, Intrepid Hero and Hatchet Man.

Local heroes invited to compete are Crafty Drone, Passionate Pirate, Zografos, Proponent, Famed Comedian, Pondelli, Yarao and Shiney Sun.

The race will be contested by thoroughbreds three-years-old and up over 1-1/8 miles on the regular dirt course.

"In honor of the 50th year of racing here at Arlington Park, we have scheduled the Golden Invitational as an added attraction for next Saturday's program in appreciation for the loyal support of our patrons," Joyce said.

"It should be a banner day of racing as in addition to the Golden Invitational, we will also be offering the 16th running of the $75,000 added Round Table Handicap for three-year-olds at one mile and one-sixteenth on the grass."

The all-important weights for the field will be determined by Racing Secretary Guy C. Klank today. Then the excruciating wait for further acceptances begins.

That kind of influence is appreciated on a team fighting for a pennant. And above all, Greg Luzinski is a team player.

"Of course, in baseball you're always playing for the team," said Greg. "It's a team game. But at the same time you're also playing for yourself. The individual honors, the statistics, come at the end. But if it's a winning team, those individual things will be there. That's the way it is on this team." Luzinski finished talking, unwrapped a piece of chewing gum, and popped it in his mouth.

He was through talking — with his mouth. Now he would let his bat speak for him, loud and clear.

PROSPECT HEIGHTS native Greg Luzinski of the Philadelphia Phillies adjusts his helmet during batting practice at Wrigley Field Monday. Luzinski is hitting .306 with the division leading Phillies.

PHILLIES' STAR Greg Luzinski obliges a young fan with an autograph prior to Monday's game against the Cubs at Wrigley Field. Luzinski went 0-for-4 against the Cubs, but drove in a run with a fielder's choice. The Cubs won the game, 4-2.

Bonham, Cubs motor past Phils

Bill Bonham, who spent the last quiet moments before Monday's game reading an automotive parts magazine, put the hammer down on his pitching arm to throttle the Cubs to a 4-2 triumph over the runaway division-leading Philadelphia Phillies.

Using the combustion of Pete LaCock's decisive first-inning home run with a man aboard and Joe Coleman's flawless relief, Bonham proceeded to throw a monkey wrench into Philadelphia's smooth running gears to earn his seventh triumph in 16 decisions and extending the Cub winning streak to four straight.

Bonham changed speeds effectively and kept the Phillies spinning their wheels with a tailing fastball and hump-backed change-up.

The Cubs also benefitted from a prevailing northeast wind that relegated a Mike Schmidt rocket to the warning track and blew three Cub fly balls out of reach of Phillie outfielders.

The refreshing 13-mile per hour breeze fooled Jay Johnstone as Joe Wallis' leadoff fly ball landed safely in right field for a single.

John Summers, a last minute replacement for Jose Cardenal, flied to left, but Bill Madlock improved his .318 batting average with a double down the third base line.

Jerry Morales scored Wallis while Madlock was being run down between second and third before LaCock picked on a belt-high Jim Lonborg fastball, driving it onto the rightfield catwalk for his sixth round tripper.

The Phillies rebounded for a pair in the third on back-to-back singles by Dave Cash and Larry Bowa, Schmidt's double into the Cub bullpen and an infield roller by Greg Luzinski.

Bonham and Coleman served goose eggs the rest of the way.

Bonham was lifted in the seventh when he walked Dave Cash and Larry Bowa singled with one out. Coleman side-armed his way out of the jam and popped his clutch again in the eighth after yielding a leadoff double to Jay Johnstone and balking him to third with nobody down.

The Cubs added an insurance run in the sixth on successive wind-blown doubles by Manny Trillo and George Mitterwald to chase Lonborg, but his successor Gene Garber held the Cubs hitless the rest of the way.

With an even 10,000 fans on hand, the Cubs tagged Lonborg with his sixth defeat against 12 triumphs. The two clubs will clash again today in a doubleheader beginning at noon.

Rick Reuschel (9-8) and Steve Stone (2-3) will try to prolong the Cub win streak to six.

Day's bat simmers in Rebel doubleheader

In the two doubleheaders played by the Northwest Rebels over the weekend one of the few similarities between the pair was that they split each one.

Against the Chicago Stars Saturday, 26 total runs scored with the Rebels winning the opener, 8-3, and the Stars taking the second game, 11-4.

On the following day, with the Skokie Indians as the opponents, only three total runs were recorded. The Rebels again won the opener, 2-0 in 12 innings, but lost the second game, 1-0.

Weak defense hurt the Rebels in both losses. Rick Marino started the second game Saturday and only three of the nine runs he allowed were earned.

The one run that beat the Rebels Sunday was also unearned.

In the opener Saturday, the Rebels used a big five-run fifth inning to defeat the Stars. Mike Quade started it off by reaching on an error followed by a single from Scott Day. A walk to Bruce Hanson loaded the bases.

Dean Sheridan drove in Quade with a single before Bruce Eberle's double brought in two more runs. The two RBIs gave Eberle a total of 30 for the season, a career high for him which is leading the team.

Singles hit by John Theriault and Bill Bulthuis completed the inning.

Willie Kozel pitched the first six innings to get the victory, upping his record to 6-1. Ray Gross got a save.

In the second game, the Rebels scattered five hits and failed to score. Quade had two of the hits.

With two outs in the Indians' fifth, Rebels' third baseman Sheridan threw wildly to first on a ground ball. The runner went to second and then scored on a single.

Al Schuette gave up only two hits, but the loss moved his record to 5-2. His earned-run-average dropped to 1.74, best on the team.

The Rebels are now 24-7, Good enough for second place in the Greater Illinois Baseball League (GIBL). The finish of a protested game will be the end of regular season play. The Rebels are leading 2-0 in the fifth inning of that game against Kenosha.

Even though the team batting average dipped a little during the weekend, the Rebels are still hitting at a .303 clip.

The GIBL playoffs are scheduled for August 14-15 with the top eight teams playing single elimination. The Rebels are the defending champions.

Green worked the first eight innings while Good handled the final four to earn the 2-0, 12-inning win.

The Rebels scored two runs in the top of the 12th. With one out, Sheridan singled, Eberle was hit by a pitch and Theriault picked up an infield single to load the bases.

Good brought in the first run with a walk before Day's sacrifice fly scored the other.

Woody, OSU football under attack

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI) — Ohio State Athletic Director Ed Weaver said Monday he had no knowledge of financial transactions alleged to have occurred between various Ohio State alumni and others for transporting prospective student-athletes to the campus for recruiting visits.

The State News, the Michigan State University student newspaper, said it had learned from a source "close to the Buckeye grid scene for several years" that football boosters made such cash payments. It cited an instance of two police officers from Warren, Ohio, receiving payments from a member of an OSU alumni group of $75 and $60 respectively to drive football prospects to Columbus.

"To the best of our knowledge, the students in question received only one 'paid' visit to the OSU campus during the time they were being recruited — the one authorized by the rules," Weaver said in a brief statement. "We have no knowledge of the financial transactions which were alleged to have occurred between various Ohio State alumni and others.

"The allegations reported to have been printed in the Michigan State student newspaper appear to be vague.

"Different sets of NCAA and Big Ten rules were in effect at the various times mentioned, and we are not at all certain as to what the precise violations are alleged to be."

Officials here, he said, "have not received any notification by either the NCAA or the Big Ten that charges of any kind have been brought against Ohio State University or that we are the subject of any kind of investigative proceeding."

The Michigan State University student newspaper contended in its copyrighted story that the payments amounted to violations of NCAA and Big Ten recruiting rules.

The story followed an admission by OSU Coach Woody Hayes in Chicago Friday that he supplied information on football recruiting violations at Michigan State to the NCAA, launching an investigation that culminated with the Spartans being placed on three years probation. The NCAA sanctions against Michigan State also resulted in the firing of Spartan head football Coach Denny Stolz.

The State News said that, when confronted with the allegations, Hayes responded: "Then you better print it, mister. I have a very good lawyer and I would be glad to take you to court."

"I know nothing about it at all," Big Ten Commissioner Wayne Duke told the newspaper. "I have no information at all. I'd have to look at the rules at that time. I can't see where it represents any great deal."

Foolish Pleasure to honor rain check

by JIM COOK

Turf Editor

It appears as if Horse of the Year candidate Foolish Pleasure, who accepted a rain check earlier this month, will honor that commitment with an appearance in Saturday's $125,000 Arlington Golden Invitational.

The race, which wasn't on the original stakes schedule, is the brain child of Joseph Joyce, Jr. who has assumed the position of Chairman of the Board for Arlington-Washington Park Race Tracks Corp.

Acting as the ringmaster in Arlington's new circus atmosphere which has already drawn such side-show acts as the Playboy bunnies, Harlem Globetrotters and a bevy of National Basketball Assn. stars, Joyce may stage the "Greatest Show" in Arlington's 110-day meeting.

The event, which with a little luck could rival the Arlington Invitational and Secretariat's appearance two years ago, will commemorate the track's 50 years in operation.

The stature of the race, though, will depend upon its constituents. Foolish Pleasure was initially scheduled to go to post in the Washington Park Handicap July 17, but poor weather grounded the 4-year-old colt's plane in New York.

Trainer Leroy Jolley's gem, however, has already accepted the invitation and track officials are hopeful that the former Kentucky Derby winner will be bedded down in the local barns by Wednesday.

Others who are expected to honor out-of-state invitations are multiple stakes winner Double Edge Sword, Festive Mood and El Pitirre.

Two-time horse of the year, Forego, was invited, but has a filled leg and will be out of action for some time.

Another racing millionaire, Dahlia, will send word as to her status as will handicap stars Avatar, Lord Rebeau, American History, Intrepid Hero and Hatchet Man.

Local heroes invited to compete are Crafty Drone, Passionate Pirate, Zografos, Proponent, Famed Comedian, Pondelli, Yarao and Shiney Sun.

The race will be contested by thoroughbreds three-years-old and up over 1-1/8 miles on the regular dirt course.

"In honor of the 50th year of racing here at Arlington Park, we have scheduled the Golden Invitational as an added attraction for next Saturday's program in appreciation for the loyal support of our patrons," Joyce said.

"It should be a banner day of racing as in addition to the Golden Invitational, we will also be offering the 16th running of the $75,000 added Round Table Handicap for three-year-olds at one mile and one-sixteenth on the grass."

The all-important weights for the field will be determined by Racing Secretary Guy C. Klank today. Then the excruciating wait for further acceptances begins.

Baseball players OK new contract

WASHINGTON — The major league baseball players have overwhelmingly approved a new labor contract with the owners, drastically revamping the former rigid reserve clause, it was announced Monday at a congressional hearing.

Marvin J. Miller, executive director of the Major League Baseball Players Association, told a House sports committee that partial results from 15 of the 24 unions showed a vote of 352-18 in favor of the new collective bargaining contract. He added that the vote accepting a liberalized pension plan was 424-3.

The owners have already voted to accept the contract.

Miller told newsmen that even if the remaining nine clubs voted unanimously against the contract, there would still be a majority of union members for it.

The union official also told the House group that in his opinion Commissioner Bowie Kuhn exceeded his authority in vetoing Charles O. Finley's sale of three Oakland Stars to Boston and New York.

Kuhn blocked the sale by Finley of Oakland's Joe Rudi and Rollie Fingers to the Boston Red Sox and of pitcher Vida Blue to the New York Yankees on grounds the multi-million dollar transactions were "not in the best interests of baseball."

Politics threaten 1980 games

MONTREAL — Lord Killanin, president of the International Olympic Committee, said Monday the 1980 Olympics will be canceled if the Russian government introduces last minute olitics into the games.

"You have to accept people's word. If not, the games will have to be canceled," said Killanin.

Artistically and tehnically the Montreal games, which ended Sunday, were a triumph, but 29 Arab and African countries did not participate, while the Republic of China team returned home rather than compete as Taiwan.

Politics very nearly ruined Montreal's $1.5 billion festival of youth when the Canadian government, at the last minute, insisted the ROC team only could compete under the name of Taiwan, while the Arab-African bloc walked out to protest a rugby union tour of South Africa by the New Zealand national team.

Russians cancel U.S. diving meet

MONTREAL — Soviet Olympic officials charged Monday teenage Russian defector Sergei Nemtsanov was kidnaped from the Olympic Village and "psychologically brainwashed" before he rejected an appeal to return home.

Anatoly Kolesov, deputy head of the Soviet Olympic Mission, said of Saturday's meeting between Nemtsanov and his diving coach Gerdt Burov: "We had the impression Sergei Nemtsanov had been psychologically brain-washed by professional trained specialists. He was in a very depressed state, he was pale and he repeated, just like a parrot, 'I chose freedom.' "

Diver 'brainwashed,' Soviets charge

HANOVER, N.H. — The Soviet Union, angered by the defection of diver Sergei Nemtsanov, have withdrawn from a United States-USSR dual diving meet scheduled at Dartmouth College.

The Russian team was called home immediately after the Olympic Games, said Dartmouth Athletic Director Seaver Peters. The Russians had threatened to pull out of the games before they were over because of Nemtsanov's disappearance.

The diving meet, which would have included two gold medal winners among six Olympic medalists, was scheduled for Thursday and Friday. Plans were shaping up for the Soviet Union to reciprocate in 1977.

Boxer gets 18-month jail term

SANTA FE, Argentina — Carlos Monzon, world middleweight boxing champion, was sentenced Monday to 18 months in jail for slugging a photographer during a Christmas party in 1967.

The fighter, who successfully defended his world title June 26 against Colombia's Rodrigo "Rocky" Valdes in Monte Carlo, is planning a trip to Europe to continue his movie acting career.

Red Sox extend Zimmer's contract

BOSTON — Don Zimmer, who took over the sagging Boston Red Sox last month on an interim basis, has had his managerial contract extended through 1977, the club announced Monday.

Entering Monday night's game against the Indians at Cleveland, Zimmer had directed the Red Sox to a 6-9 record. They lost seven of the first eight games under Zimmer, but played their best baseball of the season in taking three of four games this past weekend from the New York Yankees.

There had been speculation the 45-year-old Zimmer would be relieved at the end of the season and that Baltimore manager Earl Weaver, apparently anxious to leave the Orioles, would be hired by Boston.

Montreal could seem like a happy dream

Preview to Moscow's 1980 games

by GERALD LOUGHRAN

MONTREAL — So you think Montreal was tough?

Wait until Moscow.

When the 1980 Olympic Games open in a Communist capital for the first time, Western athletes and the news media are likely to run into problems that will make 1976 seem like a happy dream.

It would be unfair to judge the Soviets on the basis of what has not even happened yet. But experience of the system suggests conflict will be unavoidable.

There is little doubt the sporting facilities will be excellent. Moscow already has probably the greatest number of playing fields, tracks, stadia, swimming pools and gymnasiums for a city of its size in the world.

And though some concern already is being voiced at the slow rate of hotel-building, in the end the accommodation will be provided. The Soviets can call on the biggest standing army in the world — it frequently does for agricultural work — if construction gets behind.

Though Western experts say the Soviet Union is approximately seven years behind the West in computer technology, the prestige value of an efficient performance will ensure Moscow at least matches Montreal in the use of technology for a results service, timings and a host of other applications.

And experience of the Apollo-Soyuz joint space project proved the Russians can handle, albeit in their own fashion, the communications needs of large numbers of Western journalists.

Where conflict is likely to arise is in the areas of human contacts.

In the Soviet Union, the state runs everything. Its orders are carried out by a massive and suspicious bureaucracy, at best indifferent to those it serves, at worst hotile. Instructions are rarely questioned. Everything must be on paper. Rule-bending and compromise to meet a new system for processing arriving passengers. At present the average time to clear Customs and immigration at Moscow airport is rarely less than one hour.

The frontier troops who painstakingly copy down passport details rarely speak anything but Russian and the usually female Customs officers are unremittingly thorough. They are not renowned for jollity.

Since material incentives were replaced at the Bolshevik revolution by joy in work, service in the Soviet Union is extremely bad by Western standards.

A recent guest at Moscow's biggest hotel asked for a soft-boiled egg and got a cold hard-boiled one and a cup of hot water to warm it up in .A $3,000-per-performance opera diva was told ham and eggs was off the breakfast menu and had to settle for cheese and a roll. The cheese was moldy.

Though the Russians are suspicious of foreigners, they are at heart a warm and friendly people and visitors doubtless will find evidence of this provided they are prepared to make the effort.

Games visitors offended by the "iron collar" security of Montreal must be prepared for a shock in Moscow. Security is total. Even without the Olympic Games.

Blue-uniformed policemen are at every street corner in the capital. Militiamen are stationed at all the compounds in which resident foreigners are sequestered, officially for their "protection."

The secret police, properly the State Committee for Security of KGB, are omnipresent.

It is a good guess these forces will be heavily beefed up for the Games and if Carlos is still around, he will need more than sunglasses to hide from the all-seeing eye of Soviet security.

Moscow is no longer on iron rations, but visitors can expect to find shortages of foods they take for granted at home. Fresh vegetables, particularly, are often hard to come by, but you'll be all right if you like cabbage.

An undisputed plus is vodka. Very much better than the brands normally available in the West and still much cheaper.

THE PHILLIES' Dave Cash is forced at second base in the first inning at Wrigley Field Monday. The Cubs forced Cash, but couldn't get the double play as Larry Bowa was safe at first on the play. The Cubs won, 4-2.

Baseball players OK new contract

WASHINGTON — The major league baseball players have overwhelmingly approved a new labor contract with the owners, drastically revamping the former rigid reserve clause, it was announced Monday at a congressional hearing.

Marvin J. Miller, executive director of the Major League Baseball Players Association, told a House sports committee that partial results from 15 of the 24 unions showed a vote of 352-18 in favor of the new collective bargaining contract. He added that the vote accepting a liberalized pension plan was 424-3.

The owners have already voted to accept the contract.

Miller told newsmen that even if the remaining nine clubs voted unanimously against the contract, there would still be a majority of union members for it.

The union official also told the House group that in his opinion Commissioner Bowie Kuhn exceeded his authority in vetoing Charles O. Finley's sale of three Oakland Stars to Boston and New York.

Kuhn blocked the sale by Finley of Oakland's Joe Rudi and Rollie Fingers to the Boston Red Sox and of pitcher Vida Blue to the New York Yankees on grounds the multi-million dollar transactions were "not in the best interests of baseball."

Politics threaten 1980 games

MONTREAL — Lord Killanin, president of the International Olympic Committee, said Monday the 1980 Olympics will be canceled if the Russian government introduces last minute olitics into the games.

"You have to accept people's word. If not, the games will have to be canceled," said Killanin.

Artistically and tehnically the Montreal games, which ended Sunday, were a triumph, but 29 Arab and African countries did not participate, while the Republic of China team returned home rather than compete as Taiwan.

Politics very nearly ruined Montreal's $1.5 billion festival of youth when the Canadian government, at the last minute, insisted the ROC team only could compete under the name of Taiwan, while the Arab-African bloc walked out to protest a rugby union tour of South Africa by the New Zealand national team.

Russians cancel U.S. diving meet

MONTREAL — Soviet Olympic officials charged Monday teenage Russian defector Sergei Nemtsanov was kidnaped from the Olympic Village and "psychologically brainwashed" before he rejected an appeal to return home.

Anatoly Kolesov, deputy head of the Soviet Olympic Mission, said of Saturday's meeting between Nemtsanov and his diving coach Gerdt Burov: "We had the impression Sergei Nemtsanov had been psychologically brain-washed by professional trained specialists. He was in a very depressed state, he was pale and he repeated, just like a parrot, 'I chose freedom.' "

Diver 'brainwashed,' Soviets charge

HANOVER, N.H. — The Soviet Union, angered by the defection of diver Sergei Nemtsanov, have withdrawn from a United States-USSR dual diving meet scheduled at Dartmouth College.

The Russian team was called home immediately after the Olympic Games, said Dartmouth Athletic Director Seaver Peters. The Russians had threatened to pull out of the games before they were over because of Nemtsanov's disappearance.

The diving meet, which would have included two gold medal winners among six Olympic medalists, was scheduled for Thursday and Friday. Plans were shaping up for the Soviet Union to reciprocate in 1977.

Boxer gets 18-month jail term

SANTA FE, Argentina — Carlos Monzon, world middleweight boxing champion, was sentenced Monday to 18 months in jail for slugging a photographer during a Christmas party in 1967.

The fighter, who successfully defended his world title June 26 against Colombia's Rodrigo "Rocky" Valdes in Monte Carlo, is planning a trip to Europe to continue his movie acting career.

Red Sox extend Zimmer's contract

BOSTON — Don Zimmer, who took over the sagging Boston Red Sox last month on an interim basis, has had his managerial contract extended through 1977, the club announced Monday.

Entering Monday night's game against the Indians at Cleveland, Zimmer had directed the Red Sox to a 6-9 record. They lost seven of the first eight games under Zimmer, but played their best baseball of the season in taking three of four games this past weekend from the New York Yankees.

There had been speculation the 45-year-old Zimmer would be relieved at the end of the season and that Baltimore manager Earl Weaver, apparently anxious to leave the Orioles, would be hired by Boston.

Montreal could seem like a happy dream

Preview to Moscow's 1980 games

by GERALD LOUGHRAN

MONTREAL — So you think Montreal was tough?

Wait until Moscow.

When the 1980 Olympic Games open in a Communist capital for the first time, Western athletes and the news media are likely to run into problems that will make 1976 seem like a happy dream.

It would be unfair to judge the Soviets on the basis of what has not even happened yet. But experience of the system suggests conflict will be unavoidable.

There is little doubt the sporting facilities will be excellent. Moscow already has probably the greatest number of playing fields, tracks, stadia, swimming pools and gymnasiums for a city of its size in the world.

And though some concern already is being voiced at the slow rate of hotel-building, in the end the accommodation will be provided. The Soviets can call on the biggest standing army in the world — it frequently does for agricultural work — if construction gets behind.

Though Western experts say the Soviet Union is approximately seven years behind the West in computer technology, the prestige value of an efficient performance will ensure Moscow at least matches Montreal in the use of technology for a results service, timings and a host of other applications.

And experience of the Apollo-Soyuz joint space project proved the Russians can handle, albeit in their own fashion, the communications needs of large numbers of Western journalists.

Where conflict is likely to arise is in the areas of human contacts.

In the Soviet Union, the state runs everything. Its orders are carried out by a massive and suspicious bureaucracy, at best indifferent to those it serves, at worst hotile. Instructions are rarely questioned. Everything must be on paper. Rule-bending and compromise to meet a new system for processing arriving passengers. At present the average time to clear Customs and immigration at Moscow airport is rarely less than one hour.

The frontier troops who painstakingly copy down passport details rarely speak anything but Russian and the usually female Customs officers are unremittingly thorough. They are not renowned for jollity.

Since material incentives were replaced at the Bolshevik revolution by joy in work, service in the Soviet Union is extremely bad by Western standards.

A recent guest at Moscow's biggest hotel asked for a soft-boiled egg and got a cold hard-boiled one and a cup of hot water to warm it up in .A $3,000-per-performance opera diva was told ham and eggs was off the breakfast menu and had to settle for cheese and a roll. The cheese was moldy.

Though the Russians are suspicious of foreigners, they are at heart a warm and friendly people and visitors doubtless will find evidence of this provided they are prepared to make the effort.

Games visitors offended by the "iron collar" security of Montreal must be prepared for a shock in Moscow. Security is total. Even without the Olympic Games.

Blue-uniformed policemen are at every street corner in the capital. Militiamen are stationed at all the compounds in which resident foreigners are sequestered, officially for their "protection."

The secret police, properly the State Committee for Security of KGB, are omnipresent.

It is a good guess these forces will be heavily beefed up for the Games and if Carlos is still around, he will need more than sunglasses to hide from the all-seeing eye of Soviet security.

Moscow is no longer on iron rations, but visitors can expect to find shortages of foods they take for granted at home. Fresh vegetables, particularly, are often hard to come by, but you'll be all right if you like cabbage.

An undisputed plus is vodka. Very much better than the brands normally available in the West and still much cheaper.

Ask Andy

Galaxy colossal group of stars

Andy sends the Encyclopaedia Britannica's 1976 Yearbook of Science and the Future to Jean Weber, 12, of Portland, Ore., for her question:

WHAT IS A GALAXY?

Describing a galaxy is something like describing a stretch of beach in terms of the number of grains of sand. A galaxy is a colossal collection of stars, and our own galaxy, the Milky Way, contains about 200,000 million stars. The Milky Way is so huge that it is impossible to express distances in miles. So we use a different unit of measure a light-year — the distance that light travels in one year at the rate of 186,000 miles per second.

We space-age earthlings have become somewhat accustomed to dealing with astronomical figures. We know our life-giving sun is 93 million miles away from us. We also know that all other stars are so far away that we speak of the distances in terms of light-years. For example, the closest star seen at night is Alpha Centauri. It is about 25 trillion miles away from earth, or four light-years distant. In other words, if you could travel at the speed of light, 186,000 miles per second, it would take you four years to reach Alpha Centauri.

Astronomers tell us that there are billions of galaxies in the universe, and that each galaxy contains billions of stars. Our sun and all the planets in our solar system plus all the stars in our sky belong to the Milky Way galaxy, which is about 100,000 light-years across. If you were an astronaut out in space looking down at our galaxy, you would see a bright spiral of glowing light — something like a giant pinwheel. Our entire solar system is out in one of the spiral arms of this huge celestial structure, speeding around the center at about 560,000 mph. Yet it takes about 200 million years for our solar system to make just one trip around the center of our galaxy.

Astronomers can only speculate on the number of galaxies in the universe. Only three galaxies beyond our own Milky Way can be seen without the aid of a telescope. Two appear as huge stellar clouds over the Southern Hemisphere, and were named for the explorer Magellan. In our own vicinity, there are 17 galaxies located within a region 2 million light-years in diameter. These and thousands of other galaxies have been photographed through such highpowered telescopes as the 200-inch Hale telscope at Palomar Observatory in California.

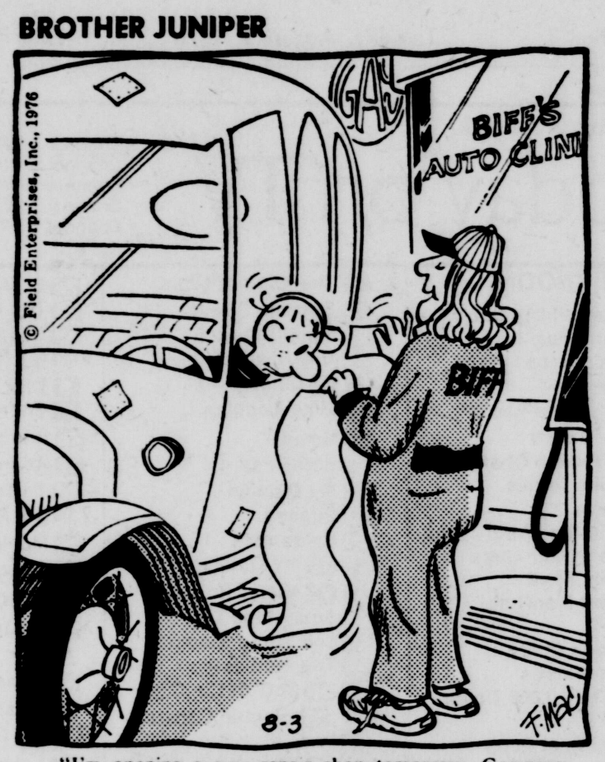

Galaxies are usually classified according to their appearance. The Milky Way is a spiral galaxy because it has a disk-like shape with spiraling arms. Some galaxies are elliptical — or nearly circular in shape. Others are barred, and a small percentage have such indefinite shapes that they are called irregular.

If a galaxy appears reddish, then it is probahly an older system, containing stars which have gone through their evolutionary process very slowly. The stars have smaller masses than our sun, and they eventually expand into red giant stars. If the galaxy is blue, it probably contains very hot young stars, which evolve rapidly and soon fizzle out.

Today is Tuesday, Aug. 3, the 216th day of 1976 with 150 to follow.

The moon is between its first quarter and full phase.

The morning stars are Jupiter and Saturn.

The evening stars are Venus, Mars and Mercury.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Leo.

Famed World War II correspondent Ernie Pyle and actress Dolores del Rio were born on Aug. 3, he in 1900 and she in 1905.

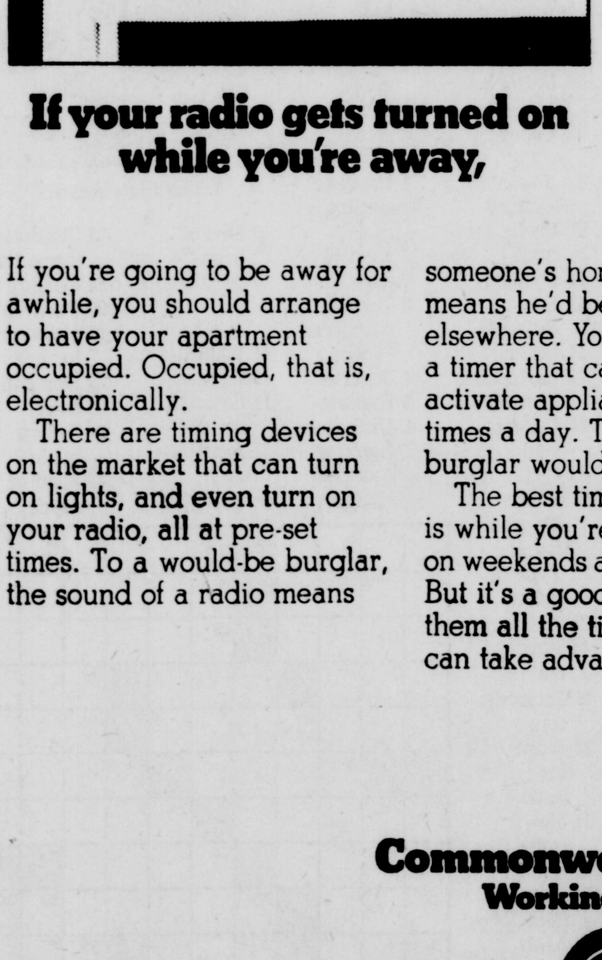

On this day in history:

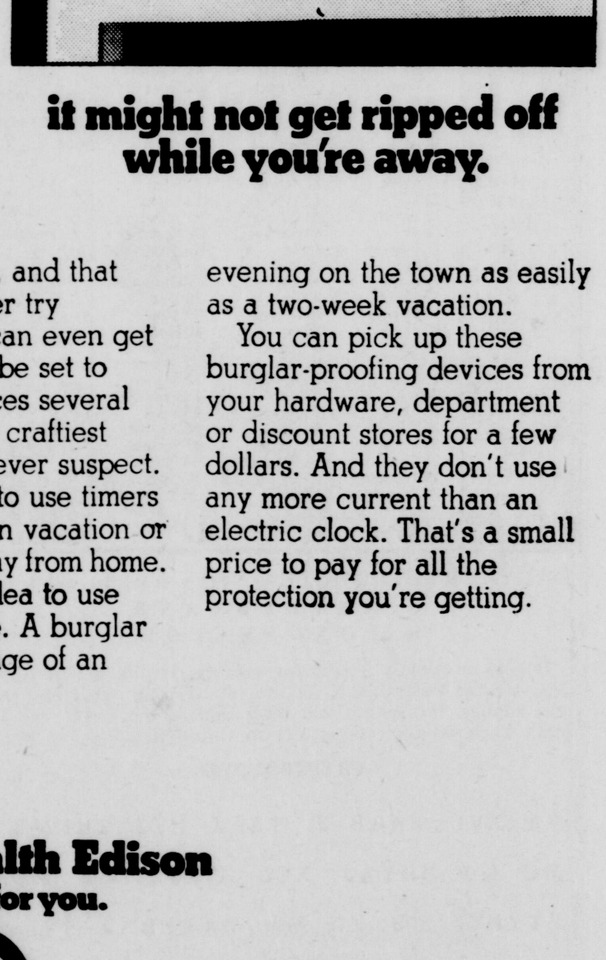

• In 1492, Christopher Columbus set sail from Spain for the "New World" with a convoy of three small ships — the Santa Maria, the Nina and the Pinta — and fewer than 100 men.

• In 1914, Germany declared war on France. The following day Britain declared war on Germany and World War I was under way.

• In 1958, the American nuclear submarine "Nautilus" completed the first crossing of the North Pole.

• In 1975, a chartered airliner carrying workers from France crashed in a thick fog in southern Morocco, killing all 188 persons aboard.

If your radio gets turned on while you're away, it might not get ripped off while you're away.

If you're going to be away for awhile, you should arrange to have your apartment occupied. Occupied, that is, electronically.

There are timing devices on the market that can turn on lights, and even turn on your radio, all at pre-set times. To a would-be burglar, the sound of a radio means someone's home, and that means he'd better try elsewhere. You can even get a timer that can be set to activate appliances several times a day. The craftiest burglar would never suspect.

The best time to use timers is while you're on vacation or on weekends away from home. But it's a good idea to use them all the time. A burglar can take advantage of an evening on the town as easily as a two-week vacation.

You can pick up these burglar-proofing devices from your hardware, department or discount stores for a few dollars. And they don't use any more current than an electric clock. That's a small price to pay for all the protection you're getting.

Wit and talent behind Simon's 'Red Hot Lovers'

Mid-week review

by BONITA BRODT

It's refreshing to catch a performance of a Neil Simon comedy that heralds the actors as much as the playwright's natural wit.

You'll find such a performance in "The Last of the Red Hot Lovers," currently on stage at the Country Club Comedy Theater in Mount Prospect.

Neither of the play's two actors — Tom Ventriss or Nancy Kole — succumb to a familiar tendency to let down on the acting and force Simon's lines to carry the whole evening. Rather, they offer a stylized interpretation of the play's humor we can appreciate and enjoy.

VENTRISS IS a genuine crowd pleaser in his portrayal of Barney Cashman, the eccentric 47-year-old who tries to spark up an extramarital affair after 23 years of devotion to his wife.

His mother's empty apartment is the scenario for Cashman's three attempted seductions. And, since the place is not the choice spot for an afternoon rendezvous, Cashman makes do with what he can. He brings his own liquor and cocktail glasses in a small green suitcase and decorates the coffee table with an ashtray.

Ventriss makes the audience laugh louder with each of Cashman's attempts to grow more assertive and suave.

It is easy to get caught up in Cashman's predicament since Ventriss adds a few stylized, comic bits of his own. And, whether Cashman is the conservative, dressed in a basic grey suit as we first see him, or the more aggressive man in a denim leisure outfit, he is a very likable fellow.

NANCY KOLE is very adaptable in her interpretations of three different women in the show. She is a whiz for matching the appropriate body language with her lines.

She is most entertaining in her interpretations of the always depressed Jeanette Fisher and the giddy Bobbi Michele. Her Elaine Navazio character is more forced and automatic than the other two but remains an entertaining portrayal.

Director Rick Snyder has done a good job in both directing and staging. The sets for the three different acts change like the characters, more flamboyant each time.

Although there were several line runovers the night I saw the performance, the actors were able to pick up from their muffs and carry the performance through with little interruption.

"The Last of the Red Hot Lovers" is a light and entertaining comedy that features an aggressive and talented cast. They don't expect Simon to do all the work.

West helps squeeze East

Win at bridge

by Oswald and Jim Jacoby

South let West hold the first trick with his queen of spades after East followed with the eight. West continued with the trey and East played the king.

South had a problem. Assuming West had led from a six-card suit he could duck that second spade, take the third, play three rounds of diamonds and hope that East would have exactly three diamonds. South saw that that play would fail if spades were 5-4 and decided on another line.

He won the second spade and led back the 10. West won and could have beaten the hand by leading anything but a spade, but West was a firm believer in the principle that a trick in the hand is worth two on the table. He cashed his last two spades.

South chucked a heart and diamond while dummy shed red cards. East chucked a heart.

West led the queen of hearts. South won and played his second-high heart to squeeze East. He had to unguard either diamonds or clubs and South had his ninth trick.

Paris puts women back into skirts

St. Laurent's peasant look most exciting in years

by ALINE MOSBY

PARIS — A revolution may be overturning Paris fashion: The folklore look that puts the natural female body back in style.

Yves St. Laurent fired the first shot of this coup d'etat last April with a winter ready-to-wear showing that came on like a folk dance troupe from the Russian steppes and central Asia.

For this more important winter high fashion collection last week, St. Laurent showed he was serious. He repeated the April show, but in lavish furs and fabrics for a parade of clothes that was one of the most exciting Paris has seen in years.

St. Laurent is regarded as the most influential voice in women's clothing. His April message also showed up in other high fashion showings last week.

EMANUEL UNGARO'S girls looked like lamas in the high Himalayan clothes of his collection, which was rooted entirely in Tibet. Even the restrained Hubert De Givenchy threw in some faint Russian touches in his show.

The St. Laurent revolution is based on the centuries-old theory that a full skirt tight over the hips, a cinched waist and loose blouse with round neckline and ballooning sleeves can be very sexy and feminine.

This does not mean the death of trousers or tailored wear, since gone are the days when Paris ruled the world with one sthle. Fewer trousers were shown but even St. Laurent still showed two-trouser outfits. All the houses make pants for their cheaper ready-to-wear collections. But more skirts will be worn.

Women jammed the Andre Courreges' boutique on the Rue Du Faubourg St. Honore last week when his new winter pants with a curved seam in back showed up.

BUT WOMEN ALSO lined up to grab the new St. Laurent read-to-wear peasant garb in his boutique next door — despite groans from some of the conservative American buyers who keep insisting women don't want to look like 19th century Siberian village girls.

The St. Laurent show looked like a trip on the old Orient Express starting in Moscow with stops in Tashkent, Samarkand, Tbilisi, Constantinople and Omar Khayam-land. All the cossack, boyard, gypsy, harem, Turkish and East European looks were there.

Another effect already seen of the St. Laurent revolution is the comeback of the ballgown in stiff fabrics. For the first time in years the rustle of taffeta was heard on the high fashion runways and the salons believe the black taffeta full-skirted evening gown will be the uniform for the Beautiful People set next winter.

Pierre Balmain made his ballgowns strapless. Jean Louis Scherrer's came with matching Italian opera-like black capes and Casanova feather masks. The Lanvin salon's were so high-waisted that there was room only for handkerchief-sized tight low-cut bodices that brought back squashed cleavage.

THE NINA RICCI salon's black taffeta gowns had enormous puffy sleeves fit for a soiree in the Elysee Palace. St. Laurent's enormous skirts billowed over two or three petticoats of contrasting fabrics or colors, requiring wide doorways and at last two seats at the opera.

The skirt was the star at St. Laurent. Even when an outfit was one-piece he used contrasting fabrics to make it look two-piece.

Even refined Givenchy as well as St. Laurent mixed groups of four vivid colors that the old rules said would never go together — sapphire blue, turquoise, brown and burgundy, for example.

The over-all look at the majority of the designers, however, still is narrow, although softer.

DESPITE THE St. Laurent folklore upheaval, Christian Dior's designer Marc Bohan staunchly said, "The masculine sportswear look still is not finished." He showed several mannish trouser suits, fur-trimmed parkas and anoraks and gold T-shirts.

In past years Dior set the styles including the revolutionary "New Look" of 1948. Now St. Laurent, once fired from Dior, is the fashion leader.

Hemlines dropped at many houses with the peasant dresses definitely at the village square length of mid-calf. Evening wear hovered above the ankle or fell to the floor.

As to accessories, mannequins tottered around on perilously high heels. Boots had high, medium or flat heels. The girls usually hid their hair underneath turbans, Russian fur hats, Tibetan skull caps or peasant printed wool scarves. When hair did show, it was very short.

One buyer said the new full-skirted "superwoman" look foreshadows the return of brassieres (needed for stiffer fabrics such as taffeta), waist cinchers and, glory be, gloves and hats.

(United Press International)

FOR HIS WINTER high fashion collection Yves Saint Laurent revived folklore with this evening ensemble with billowing taffeta skirt over tight black velvet bodice with embroidered blouse and turban.

THIS BLACK, red and blue striped raincoat worn over blue crepe dress with drawstring waist and black crepe trousers was presented during showing of Dior winter collection.

You can save energy and still get clothes clean

by MONICA PERIN

American women have fought long and hard to get rid of those nauseating, degrading TV commercials that portrayed us as obsessed with the whiteness of our laundry. Some progress has been made, and we now wait for the message to sink in at Wisk, headquarters of "ring-around-the-collar."

Nevertheless, any intelligent person, male or female, who does laundry takes a practical interest in whether it comes out clean. If it does not, such a person tries to reason why not.

Two reasons that a lot of people's wash may have become a little dingy in recent times are the use of non-phosphate detergents and cold water, both of which reduce cleaning power, according to technicians at Maytag.

IN FACT, a Maytag technical bulletin reports, water below 60 degrees has practically no cleaning ability, and detergent is completely ineffective in such water. Powder detergents, since they must dissolve to be effective, lose their cleaning capabilities sooner than liquid detergents as water temperature decreases.

Certain types of soil, such as oil, grease and stains, require 140-degree water to clean, the bulletin reported. "A general rule is the hotter the water, the cleaner the clothes," it stated.

However, Maytag concedes that using warm or cold wash water can save substantial energy when eight to 10 loads of laundry are washed per week. They recommended sorting clothing by fabric, color and degree of dirtiness as shown in the chart, and added that pre-treating and pre-soaking may be necessary to get some clothes clean when using warm or cold wash water.

BUT THERE is no reason ever to use anything but cold water for rinsing, Maytag said, since it is simply a dilution process. Moreover, cold water rinsing minimizes wrinkling in permanent press fabrics.

Other variables available on modern washing machines can also affect laundry results and should be carefully utilized to maximum effectiveness. For example, Maytag advises, it is counterproductive to wash incompatible items together simply to achieve a full load when water level can be adjusted.

Likewise, "there is really no reason for using the full wash time with a load of clothes that is only slightly soiled," the company says.

FINALLY, ONE should follow instructions carefully to be sure of using adequate detergent — and should increase the amount if clothes are especially dirty, the load is extra large, or the clothes have not been getting clean.

Synthetic fabrics, according to Maytag technicians do not easily release oily stains, and low or non-phosphate detergents have reduced cleaning ability. These factors, coupled with warm and cold water usage, can create a cleaning problem that Maytag recommends be overcome with old-fashioned bleach.

Bleach has, in fact, regained importance as a washday aid because of these trends, Maytag says. They point out that many synthetic fabrics, including colors, can safely be bleached.

"GENERALLY, ALL synthetic fibers except Spandex and permanent press finishes can be bleached with liquid chlorine bleach," the company says. It cannot be used on wool, silk, mohair, and certain flame retardant finishes. One should always check care labels for this information. In addition, colored items can be tested for color-fastness with a bleach solution on an inside seam.

The company cautions that proper usage of bleach, according to directions on the container and directions concerning the bleach dispenser on the washing machine if it has one, is important. Allowing undiluted bleach to come into direct contact with non-synthetic fabric will weaken the fibers; it could also alter colors in any fabric.

What exactly is permanent?

Much ado about hair removal

by ELLIE GROSSMAN

Several months ago, ads for something called Depilatron began appearing in print.

"An electronic tweezer touches only the hair, not the skin, and in seconds, as if by magic, the hair is removed," read a full-page ad in the Sunday, Nov. 2, 1975, edition of The New York Times Magazine.

And, from the April 25, 1976, issue of The Chicago Tribune, "Be free of hair anywhere, quickly, safely and effectively."

In other words, it seemed a woman could get the result of electrolysis — permanent removal of unwanted hair — without the insertion of a needle into the hair follicle and the transmission of electric current to the root to kill it, which is how electrolysis works.

Depilatron, even at $40-50 an hour — $10 or $15 more than the average for electrolysis — had to be a bargain. And a gold mine.

SELIGMAN & LATZ, and Glemby International, which between them operate more than 1,000 beauty salons in the country's leading department stores, began installing Depilatron machines.

Even the Kree Institute of Electrolysis, which initially denigrated Depilatron, became a distributor.

But a snag developed which isn't generally known.

The Food and Drug Administration, operating on complaints from dissatisfied customers, studied Depilatron and concluded that the machine was misbranded. In March 1976, the agency's Boston district office sent a regulatory letter to Depilatron's headquarters in Woodbridge, Conn.

Richard J. Davis, of the FDA's Boston office, says, "We disagreed with their labeling which says Depilatron is totally effective in removing unwanted hair, based on data the company submitted to us."

THE WORD "permanent," therefore, was to be eliminated from all labeling, promotional material and advertising. And, while it was all right to claim the process was effective, painless and safe, it was not all right to say "totally effective, totally painless," etc.

With that in mind, we visited Depilatron's sales office and training school in Manhattan and spoke first with Bruce Ditness, 25, "more or less the head instructor of the school."

Just what is Depilatron, we asked.

"It's a method of permanent hair removal that works on the basis of electrolysis," he replied. "Let's say you have a TV station transmitting radio frequency energy to a TV antenna which moves it down to the TV set. That's the principle Depilatron operates on. Hair itself is not a good conductor of electricity, but it makes an excellent dielectric which means it allows the current to get to the root."

And the process is permanent, you say?

"YES. IT'S not a one-shot deal, but it's permanent." He handed over a couple of brochures, one sprinkled with the word permanent, the other alluding to it. Later, we were supplied with Xerox copies of various newspaper advertisements. One contained the word permanent; all certainly implied it.

We moved into the sales office to speak to Arnold Ditness, one of two exclusive sales agents for Depilatron here in Manhattan.

"The electrolysis business must do $50 million a year, and Depilatron is the newest innovation in it," he said. "We've placed between seven and eight hundred machines across the country and it keeps growing." Four or five years from now, "there'll be no more needle method; it will all be done with electronic tweezers."

Depilatron, then, like electrolysis, is a permanent means of hair removal, we repeated.

"Yes. People don't go in for one treatment and you're cured forever, but we have a machine that basically does the same job as electrolysis and does it in a much easier way."

SURE. THERE were lawsuits between Depilatron and the Kree Institute of Electrolysis — the former charging conspiracy, the latter, false advertising — "but that was settled. I think Kree finally realized the public would accept us and that we did have medical proof that this does work."

Speaking of that, wasn't there some conflict between the FDA and Depilatron?

"Nah," he said. "Because the electrologists were writing to the FDA, we voluntarily sent information on our product to them and at this point we have complied with anything they have asked for, and they didn't ask for much."

At most, he confided, they asked Depilatron not to use a certain word or two.

Peter Artinian is the president of the Kree Institute of Electrolysis which claims to supply 65 per cent of the approximately 6,000 electrologists in the country with their training and equipment.

"WHEN DEPILATRON first came into existence 16 years ago," says Artinian, "our experience was that the machine didn't work as a means of permanent hair removal."

He reached the same conclusion when he met with the current owners of the Depilatron patent. "They claimed they had improved the machine, but their documentation wasn't valid to us."

In fact, Kree hired its own researchers and presented their findings at a press conference in New York last November. Depilatron tweezes hair, yes, they said; but that's all it does.

Depilatron sued Kree for conspiracy and defamatory statements; Kree countersued for false advertising; and meanwhile, hundreds of women across the country were flocking for treatments.

Eventually, both companies dropped their suits and Kree began making Depilatron available along with electrolysis in its outlets.

AFTER ALL, Artinian explains, "Our market studies indicate there is an interest in the treatment. Some women prefer to go for electrolysis and others just want the hair out and don't care if it's permanent or not."

If the woman is under the impression she's receiving a permanent form of electrolysis, well, that's unfortunate.

"Depilatron ads clearly imply permanency, and we're very much against that," he says, "but the parent company hasn't used the word permanent. It's the people they license who sometimes do."

Finally, how do Kree and the beauty salon chains feel about the FDA's ruling? The consensus is: Women are eager for this service. "We make no claims for permanency in our ads; as long as those women keep coming for treatments, we'll provide them."

FDA sources in Washington say the file on Depilatron is still open.

PATTERNED sweaters are hot items for back to school. This Indian-patterned jacquard knit cardigan by Fringes for Donmoor has triple-color shawl collar and white belt. It's worn over solid rust ribbed turtleneck and beige wool slacks.

ROSANNA CREATES ombre striping in a slim tunic of Acrilan acrylic which can be worn for late day as well as for casual occasions. Wear-Dated it comes in combinations of soft mauve, oatmeal or gray. About $30.

Sweaters give flexibility

What's a sweater It's a jacket, coat, tunic, evening dress. A point of view. Designers realize more and more that women need flexibility in their lives and are no longer interested in dressing for a season or a particular hour in the day. Instead, they want seasonless and timeless clothes that are functional, attractive and easy to care for.

Sweaters help fill this need. What could be more flexible and practical than a lightweight tunic of Acrilan acrylic in a new multi-striped pattern which can be dressed up for evening By day it can be worn over skinny turtles or last season's tops and pants.

As for weather, bulky knit jackets fill in on cool days. Layers of crew necks and wraps, many with ethnic detailing, can be added as the temperature drops. The colors from which to choose are rich earthy tones and welcome classic shades of grey, camel, wine and green.

ALL IS NOT bulk. All is not big. Sweater dressing comes in fine knits with varying lengths and weights. Some versions in bright Acrilan have a silky lustrous quality that drape beautifully. For day there are sweater dresses that have fine pointelle detailing or contrasting stitching. The look is simple, attractive and effective.

The clothes are timeless and are the basis for a flexible wardrobe for women who know what they want and what they need. Better yet, many are Wear-Dated which means they are warranted for one full year's normal wear, refund or replacement by Monsanto.

$13.3 million program announced

Rail crossings to be made safer

State officials Monday outlined a $13.3 million safety program designed to reduce accidents at railroad crossings.

The program was developed through a joint study by the Illinois Commerce Commission and the Illinois Dept. of Transportation. A task force composed of safety and design engineers and officials from the ICC and transportation department and some of the state's major railroads has been formed to carry out the program.

"The revitalization of passenger trains, particularly in the Chicago-St. Louis corridor, has contributed to an increase in automobile-train accidents," said Gov. Daniel Walker in announcing the program. "Many of those accidents have occurred in crossings already protected."

A TRANSPORTATION department report states that railroad crossing accidents happen because drivers do not see the warning devices, because the devices are not present or because drivers ignore the warnings.

The program, outlined at a meeting of the Illinois House transportation subcommittee, includes a reccomendation for more visible railroad warning signals.

The federal government has approved limited experimental use of red and yellow advance warning signs, cross bucks, gates and delineators. If successful, the system would be installed statewide.

The task force will start the $13.3 million program during the current fiscal year. Federal funds will provide $7.7 million, with $4.8 million from the state's grade crossing protection fund.

MORE THAN 35 per cent of the state's 16,000 railroad crossings now are protected by signals, including 1,600 which are protected by automatic gates as well as flashing lights. The national average is about 23 per cent.

The task force will conduct an analysis of the 16,000 crossings using both ICC and transportation department data. Phase one of the study will be an analysis of the Chicago-St. Louis high-hazard corridor to be completed by late fall.

Similar studies of various other corridors will be conducted over the five-year life of the program, allowing railroads to plan the grade crossing work in an orderly fashion.

CPR courses scheduled Aug. 21-22

Fifteen paramedic squads and four hospitals will ofefr public instruction and certification in cardio-pulmonary resuscitation Aug. 21-22 in the largest CPR campaign ever conducted in the Northwest suburbs.

Paramedics include Arlington Heights, Barrington, Buffalo Grove, Des Plaines, Elk Grovd, Franklin Park, Hoffman Estates, Mount Prospect, Palatine, Park Ridge, Rolling Meadows and Schaumburg fire departments, Delta Ambulance, Lak Zurich Rescue Dept., and Town & Country Ambulance.

The hospitls are Alexian Brothers Medical Center, Elk Grove Village; Holy Family Hospital, Des Plaines; Northwest Community Hospital, Arlington Heights; and Resurrection Hospital, Chicago

CPR IS A SIMPLE emergency proceduer used to restore a persons' heart beat and breathing after a heart attack or other medical trauma.

Instructors, special films and practice mannequins will be at each class site. Each class is limited to 20 persons.

Persons interested in receiving free CPR training should call one of the fire department nonemergency telephone numbers or one of the participating hospitals for more information.

"Many people who have cardiac arrest die needlessly because, despite mobile intensive care, initial treatment is necessary to keep them alive while the paramedics are en route," says Dr. Stanley Zydlo, chief of emergency medicine at Northwest Community Hospital. "CPR is a technque the average person can learn."

Medical experts estimate that 100,000 lives could be saved yearly if one person in every hosuehold would learn CPR techniques.

Court supervision by judge allowed under new statute

A bill which legalizes Illinois judges' use of court "supervison" in sentencing procedure has been signed by Gov. Daniel Walker.

Walker Monday signed the bill which "codifies," or officially incorporates into Illinois Supreme Colrt rules, the use of supervision.

Court suervision has been used by judges as a wat to delay final verdicts and sentencing of defendants. The judge designates a supervision period during which a defendant must avoid arrest. If the supervision period is completed successfully, the defendant is found innocent of the original charge.

The procedure enables a judge to avoid or delay at guilt7 finding but still order a defendant to a type of penalty.

The bill to incorporate the sentencing procedure was introduced by the Senate committee on the judiciary at the request of the Illinois Supreme Court, Cary Schneider, press aide to Waker said.
